MEMORIAL DAY.

Honors to the Dead Soldiers of New

A GENERAL OBSERVANCE OF THE SOLEMN DAY.

Memorial day proved fair and pleasant in spite of the threatening clouds in the early morning, and the usual parade was not interfered with. It was a very busy day with members of Charles Ward Post, various detachments being sent out in the early morning to decorate the graves in the Centre street cemetery, and those at the Highlands, at West Newton and Mt. Anburn, and at 10 o'clock the Post was present in a body to decorate the graves at St. Mary's cemetery, Lower Falls. At 12 o'clock they had dinner at their head quarters in Newtonville.

About half past one the column began to form on Washington street, Newtonville the right resting on Walnut, in the following order:

West Newton, where it was reviewed by Mayor Kimball and members of the city government, from the steps of the City Hall. At Elm street the column counter government, from the steps of the city Hall. At Elm street the column countermarched back to City Hall, where it was joined by the members of the city government and invited guests.

The first carriage contained Mayor Kimball and ex-Mayor J. F. C. Hyde, Alderman Pettee and Chairman Barton of the school-board. In the second were Rev. Mr. Hornetrooke, President Burr of the Common Council, Aldermen Tyler and Childs. In other carriages were the other members of the City Council, Rev. B K. Pierce, D.D.; Rev. W. G. Wells; Rev. G. W. Shinn, D.D.; Rev. Pleasant Hunter, Rev. Dr. Wolcott Calkins, Dr. Stephen F. Chase, Representative Slocum and Walworth, Hon. J. W. Dickinson, Charles E. Parker, Dr. Baker, Isaac Hagar, James W. French, Dr. J. F. Frisbie, Agent Mosman, H. B. Coffin, George E. Bridges, Otis Pettee, Rev. T. J. Holmes, J. F. Fuller, J. L. Clarke, and others. The line of march was through Chestnut Street to Valentine, to Homer, to Walnut and then to the cemetery.

While the column was moving up

While the column was moving up Chestaut street hill, Capt. Benyon, of the High School battalion, was given three hearty cheers by the Claffin Guards, of which he was formerly captain.

AT THE CEMETERY.

On the arrival of the column at the cemetery, the order to "break ranks" was given to the High school battalion and the Claffin Guard.

The G. A. R. Post and the young sons of veterans were drawn up in line and details made to decorate the graves of fallen comrades.

When the ceremony of decorating the graves was concluded, the several details reported at the base of the soldiers' monument, where the members of the City Government and invited guests had gathered. Post Chaplain Patten then offered prayer, and at the request of Commander Sylvester, the members of the City Government deposited flowers to the memory of the unknown dead, which was accompanied by the dipping of the flag and the long roll of the drums. It was, a touching scene when the old veterans, after the city officials had retired, advanced with uncovered heads and placed their floral tributes on the graves of their dead comrades. Rev. Wolcott Calkins pronounced the benediction and the guests returned to their carriages while the annual custom of planting a tree beside the monument was carried out by Commander Sylvester, and Past Commanders Wetherevee, Picthall and Hyde and Chaplain Patten of the Post.

The column was then formed in order and moved from the cemetery through Wahnut to Beacon street, as far as the residence of Dr. Mary E. Bates, where a halt was made. The G. A. R. marched in fours on to the lawn at the side of the house, and came up in double line in front of the plazza, where Dr. Bates, president of the Woman's Relief Corps, was surrounded by the officers and members of the corps. After the Post had been drawn up, Mrs. Bates addressed them in behalf of the Woman's Relief Corps. She said:

"Friends and Comrades of Charles Ward Post—It is the pleasure of the Woman's Relief corps, through me, to present you with this flag. The idea did not originate with me but with a friend of the soldier and a former hospital nurse, and a member of our order. As you gaze upon these stars and lstripes, let it remind you that your work is not yet completed; that there are as many opportunities to show your loyalty to your country now in 1888 as there were in 1801.

"Commander Sylvester replied in an appropriate speech, accepting the flag in behalf of the Post. The color guard then advanced and received the flag.

The line was then re-formed and marched through Beacon to Centre streets to Farlow Park, where a dress parade took place, Chief Marshall Montgomery thanked the officers of the Claflin Guard and High School Battalion for participating in the exercises of the day, and complimented their commands for their soldierly bearing. The parade was then dismissed, the Post marching to the depot where barges were taken for the soveral wards, the High School Battalion and Claffin Guard going to Armory Hall where a collation was served. The Silver Fife and Drum Corps of Plymouth gave general satisfaction, and the Newton City Band gave the best music since its organization.

Death of Francis G. Barnes. The death of Francis G. Barnes came so soon after the announcement of his severe illness, that it was a great shock to his many friends in this city, where he has lived for twenty-five years and been one of the most active and public spirited citizens. He was taken ill on Saturday night last, after his return from Boston, where he had been during the day. His illness was not considered se-rious until Monday night, when his family were told of its critical nature, but Mr. Barnes was fully prepared for it, and continued as cheerful as usual until he became delirious on Wednesday morning, and twenty four hours later he sank into unconsciousness and died at a quar-ter past 10, on Thursday morning, in the presence of the members of his family, excepting one son who was too far away to reach home in time. The fact that he had been fighting against a fatal disease for months, and was fully aware of its nature was unknown to his most intimate friends, who found him as interested as ever in the topics of the day, a sunny and cheerful companion, and al-ways ready to give wise advice to those who sought him. Mr. Barnes' active in-terest in the new Elliot Church building is well known to the members of that society, where he has always been one of the leading members, and he will be greatly missed in the church. In city af-fairs Mr. Barnes had always taken great interest and was a member of the first Common Council, after the city was or-ganized. The next year he was chosen an alderman from his ward and re-elect-ed for five successive terms where ganized. The next year ne was chosen an alderman from his ward and re-elected for five successive terms when he retired on account of the exacting duties of his private business.

Mr. Barnes was born in Boston, on Aug. 5, 1820, his family removing to Waltham when he was about ten years old, where his father was engaged in the lumber business. When a young man he was for a short time in business in New York and in the Pennsslvania oil regions, but in 1857 he opened a real estate business in Boston, which he has since continued, opening a branch office here a short time afterwards. The firm is now F. G. Barnes & Son, his son Edward F. being the junior member of the firm, which is one of the largest real estate firms in Boston. He has always led such an active life that few men in Newton would leave a larger blank, and the family, which consists of a wife, two sons and a daughter, will have the deepest sympathy of all in their sad bereavement. A loving husband, a kind father, an earnest, practical, honest man, has gone to that unknown land from which no traveller returns.

The funeral services will be held at his late residence on Channing street, on Sunday, June 3, at 2 p. m.

CITY GOVERNMENT

A HEARING TO BE GIVEN ON THE ELEC TRIC LIGHT CONTRACT.

The common council met Monday eve ning, and in the absence of President Burr, Councilman Kennedy called the meeting to order and was elected president pro tem. There were present Councilmen Hamblen, Powell, Rice, Fenno, Wiswall, Bond, Hunt, Gore, Green wood, Hale, and Read. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Papers from the board of aldermen were received and disposed of in concurrence When the order for advertising for coal was presented, Councilman Rice asked if it was to be advertised only in the Newton papers; Councilman Fenno said that Boston dealers would not bid; Councilman Wiswall said the water board ties when they advertised for coal. Councilman Fenno said that the coal was to be delivered all in one place, but the coal for the city was to be delivered at a doz-en different buildings, and Boston deal-ers could not compete.

Councilman Rice presented another petition from Bruce K. Ware by Jesse C. Ivy, calling the attention of the council to the heap of sewage and garbage on Bennington street, in front of his house, which was a troublesome nuisance, and he asked that the same be abated forth-with; referred to the board of health.

NEW STREETS

Councilman Hunt presented the peti-tion of Mrs. Mary J. Addison and others, asking that Curve street in Ward 3 be laid out and accepted as a public way. It contains seven houses, with others projected, and was opened 30 feet wide in 1870; it was asked to be laid out 30 feet wide. The same parties also asked that Addison street be laid out and accepted from Curve street to land of New ton National Bank, 36 feet wide; both were referred to the highway commit-

LIGHTING THE STREETS.

Councilman Rice said he had the petition of sixty heavy tax-payers of Newton to present, who asked that a public hearto present, who asked that a public near-ing be given on the order giving a three years contract for lighting the city to the Newton Electric Light company, at a cost of $2,700 per year. The order did away with gas and substituted electricity away with gas and substituted electricity and it ought to receive serious consider-ation, and they asked for a fair hearing of all sides of the question in order to of all sides of the question in order to secure the best system of lighting the streets of the city. The signers were Henry E. Cobb, Chas. E. Billings, Chas. C. Burr. N. P. Coburn, Geo. S. Bullens and others. Councilman Rice moved and others. Councilman face moved that the petition be accepted, and that a hearing be granted the petitioners. Councilman Gore said that he hoped hearing be granted the petitioners.

Councilman Gore said that he hoped the motion would not prevail. It seemed to him that as many hearings as was necessary had been given. It was rather purile to select 21 men to do the business of the city, and then every time an important matter came up, for the citizens to come forward and instruct them as to what they had better do. He did not mean that members were above taking information from others, but it seemed to him that the proper way was to get the information by debating the question, and all the knowledge necessary in the case could be gained from that. He did not see how the council would be any better qualified to act after the hearing than they were before. He did not approve of opening the city council to a nearing every time any question of any importance came up.

Councilman Hale said that the question was no small importance, and should have the most careful consideration. It involved a large amount of money and a three years contract, and although he was a member of the street light committee and in favor of electric lights, he thought a hearing should be given to the citizens who were to pay for the lights, if they asked for it. If our action is not satisfactory to them, we should give them an opportunity to state their side of the case. The council would be better able after the hearing to take action, and those who had signed the petition were heavy tax-payers and he would heartily second the motion for a hearing.

Councilman Gore said it was true that the order appropriated $27,000 yearly, but it might not be known that we are spending $20,700 now for lighting the city, so that the amount of money under the new contract was nothing, as it was no more than we spend at present.

Conneilman Bond said it was not so much the expending of a few dollars more or less, as it was the making a total change in the method of lighting the city, and it was not for one year but for three years, and involving nearly $100,000. To spend so much money on a new system c the motion would not prevail. It seemed Councilman Powell presented the petition of John Jones and eight others, for the grading and gravelling of the sidewalks on California and Crescent streets, Councilman Hamblen presented the petition of P. A. Murray for concrete sidewalk on corner of Park and Washington streets, and of W. W. Hammett, for concrete walk on Sargent street; referred to highway committee.

WATER PIPES.

THE OLD CATHOLICS

REY, DR. SHINN'S LAST LECTURE IN HIS COURSE.

Rev. Dr. Shinn gave the last lecture in Rev. Dr. Shinn gave the last lecture in his course on "Noted Religious Movements of Modern Times," at Grace Church, Sunday evening. The course has been mainly a historical one, the facts being presented with great fairness, and in general only the more favorable points of each movement being considered. It has aroused a good deal of interest, and so much valuable information has been presented in small space, that it is hoped Dr. Shinn will conclude to publish the lectures in book form. They are upon subjects in regard to which the well-informed desire to be posted, and it is not always easy to find the authorities Sunday night's lecture was in regard to "Dollinger and the Old Catholic movement," of which so much is hoped by the friends of reform in the Roman Church. The speaker said that until a hundred years after the Apostles, the Bishop of Rome was only one of the bishops of the church and did not claim any superior power. In the sixth century we find Gregory, the Bishop of Rome, protesting against the claim put forth by the Bishop of Constantinople to be the the Bishop of Constantinople to be the head of the church, and calling such a claim the spirit of anti-christ. The East never submitted to the claims of the Pope of Rome.

The reformation of Luther was not the only attempt at reformation, but there have been more or less successful attempts all through the centuries. The Old Catholic movement in Germany is the most recent of these reformations, and it is still in progress. Several causes led up to it, but it was chiefly due to the arrogant assumptions of Pope Pius the Ninth, who became pope in 1846. One of the doctrines he put forth was that of the immaculate conception, or the absolute singlessness of the Virgin Mary. This was followed by the doctrine of Papal Infallibility. A council of bishops was called in 1869, and was in session for five Intainonity. A council of bishops was called in 1860, and was in session for five months. It was advanced as a measure that would cure all the evils in the church and the world. Two hundred of the bishops assembled fought against the doctrine, and jone American bishop called it sacrilegious. At last those who protested found that the papal party was too strong for them and most of them left the council. The doctrine was finally adopted by a vote of 535, with two dissenting and 63 protesting against it. Among the boldest of the opponents was Dr. Ignatius von Dollinger, a noted theological writer and a man 'of great influence. He and another bishop wrote the famous letters of Janus. He stood firm in his opposition and was excommunicated. This led to the Old Catholic movement, which was an endeavor to reform the church without leaving the church. Luther had often regretted that no bishops joined in his reformation, so as to sustain the line of succession. In 1874 there was a conference of the Old Catholic movement has not been a great success as yet, but as has been said, the common people of Europe have neither the intelligence nor the courage to join in any movement for religious freedom. Bishop Herzog, who represented the movement, lectured in Boston last winter, and several missions of the Old Catholic church had been started in the Northwest and a great deal was hoped for from the movement. No blessing could be greater than the reform of the abuses that have crept into the Romish church, and nothing could do more for the cause of pure religion, and it is hoped the Old Catholic movement might help to this end.

In conclusion, Dr. Shinn urged his hearers that this till considering their months. It was advanced as a measure this end.

In conclusion, Dr. Shinn urged his hearers that while still considering their own faithrand church as the true one, they should have charity for those who were trying to follow Christ by another path.

Councilman Rice had named June 18th for the hearing, and Councilman Fenno suggested that that would be a holiday. Councilman Hale said the hearing should be at as early a date as possible, and it was appointed for June 8th..at 8 p. m., the motion passing with only two dissenting votes.

A DRIVE IN CALIFORNIA

SAN JOSE, CAL., May 16, 1888.

To the editor of the GRAPHIC:

One of the most delightful rides taken during our six months' stay in California was enjoyed only a few days ago. In-deed the occasion of it will always rest in memory as a red-letter-day.

This ride was from San Jose, (pro-

This ride was from San Jose, (pronounced San Hosay), to the famous Lick Observatory, located on Mt. Hamilton, the highest mountain of the coast range near San Jose. We were called at an early hour m order to take the stage, which, because of the length of the trip, necessitated an early start.

The first part of our ride lay through the urban part of the town. The upliquic the urban part of the town. The ubiquities and celestial "John" greeted us on the street corner, with that bland smile peculiar to these transplanted antipode-ans. As we spun over the asphalt drive of Santa Clara street it put me strongly in mind of the rides I had taken on the busses on "Igh Oborn."

As we approached the foot hills of the As we approached the foot fills of the coast range towering poplar trees lined the drive on either hand. A delightful feature of this part of California, it may be said in passing, is the blending of the trees peculiar to the southern part of the state with those so familiar to us at home. To one who has never been in California and to one who is unacquainted with the richness of the verdure of this golder state, especially at this time of year, how can! begin to describe the wonderful beauty and fertility of the Santa Clara valley as we viewed it from the coach while ascending the mountain. Vast beauty and fertility of the Santa Clara valley as we viewed it from the coach while ascending the mountain. Vast orchards of apricot, peach, plum, prune and pear; and extensive vineyards could be distinctly seen, while the fields were dotted with ricks of the aljalpa grass and barley hay, the first crops of the season. In making our ascent over the circuitous road, we passed forests of the deciduous oak, which was a very pleasant reminder of home, particularly after haying only seen, and seen so much of the indigenous live oaks as we have the past winter. This mountain road was built by the councy at a cost of $100,000, and is as complete as money and skill could make it. Everywhere the gradient is easy, never exceeding 9 feet to the 100, thus permitting an easy trot to the sturdy coach-horses. In a word, Mr. Editor, the road is one to delight a Newton alderman.

As the summit is approached the valley unrolls before one like a vast panorama, scene after seene, until at a height of 4.443 the observatory is reached. To the west is the ocean, seen over the tops of the Santa Cruz mountains; to the east are the snow capped Sienna Nevadas, guarding the Yosemite Valley, while, if it be clear, to the north 400 miles away rises the shadowy profile of Shasta.

The following is a brief account of the Lick Observatory taken from a local pamphlet. The Lick Observatory is the munificent gift to mankind of James Lick. Three quarters of a million dollars were set apart for the construction of an observatory, which was to contain the largest telescope in the world. It is now in place, having consumed about ten years in completion. The giant instrument has an objective of 33 inches and a focal length of nearly 60 feet. The steel tube which forms its barrelis four feet in diameter in the middle, and alone weighs 4 tons. With its fittings and mountings the telescope has a weight of 35 tons. The dome in which it is placed is over 75 feet in diameter, weighs 122 tons, and is yet so delicately poised that it can be easily turned in a scope is the lonely but fitting tomb of James Lick. He was solitary and lonely during life.

They have not as yet discovered through their large telescope any signs of snow falling on Mars, nor have they made out any line of ferries running along Schiaparelli's canals, but there is no telling what they may find yet.

After having looked about the building sufficiently, we went outside, and found a shaded nook in which to eat our lunch. I was roused from my runnination of a ham-sandwich by the driver calling out: "Time to start."

The return trip is more agreeable than the ascent. As the stage sweeps down the road with its many curves, the landscape again unfolds. We were much interested and a good deal amused to watch the lizards as they would scamper away at the sight of the approaching coach. While watching them my attention was attracted to a tarantula, as big as an average tea cup, which was basking in the sun, and doubtless waiting for his meal of coleoptera on-the-half shell.

After a full four hours' ride we arrived home, at the St. James, feeling none the worse for our stage-ride of over fifty miles, and with a grand appetite for our dinner.

Quick Work.

The work of removing the GRAPHIC office began last Saturday morning, under the charge of M. A. Kelly, printing office mover of Boston, and by noon on omce mover of Boston, and by noon on Monday the presses and engine were set up in their new quarters and in good running order. With such men as Mr. Kelly has in his employ, moving a printing office is a mere trifle. In a month or so when we get fairly settled and the building is finished, we shall invite all our friends to come and see us.

The Newton Graphic, one of our ablest exchanges, is soon to move into new and more convenient quarters. We congratulate Bro. Baldwin upon his success in issuing such a readable paper, and his readers upon having such a publication to represent them.—[Franklin Sentinel.

A JEWELER WRITES:

MESSRS. PROCTER & GAMBLE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Gentlemen: - I think your "Ivory Soap" is about as nice and convenient a thing as I have ever tried to clean jewelry. I have frequently cleaned up soiled necklaces, watch-guards and other similar articles by making a stiff lather in my hands, then thoroughly saturate the article I want cleaned, rubbing it gently in the palms of my hands, rinsing in cold, soft water, and drying in dry sawdust. For a convenient and effective article for household use I don't think it can be beat. I don't think it would have any injurious effects on any thing except, perhaps, pearls or foil-back goods. If carefully handled, the goods come out looking nearly as bright as when cleaned by the best preparations known to the trade, and it is something perfectly safe in the hands of inexperienced persons, and convenient to have about. I find it so good I think it deserves mention, hence this letter.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'lvory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "lvory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

The men who took part in the strife were but following in the path of duty and upholding what they believed to be the right. Their hearts beat warm for their country and they made of this nation a union of states indeed. It is sometimes said that the days of patriotism have passed; that men are now too material and too selfish to be moved by such a feeling, but the shot that was fired on Sumter proved that such is not the case. It caused a great wave of patriotism to flow over the land, and men abandoned their money-making pursuits, and from the workshop, the counting-room and the college went forth to die for their country. Their deeds were true, and to recall them from year to year will keep alive the same patriotic feeling, and if occasion should arise it will be found that the sons are worthy descendents of their patriotic sires, whether the dead be in a northern cemetery or in unknown graves on southern battlefields, and will always serve as an inspiration, and as a memorial of which the nation may well be proud. Such a glorious manhood as they exhibited is a precious inheritance, and an incentive to all who come after, to show themselves men. Not only the men laid down their lives, but the women, too, responded nobly to the call of duty, and we had heroines as well as heroes—heroines who were present in the hospitals, by the side of the dead and dying. We must all be be proud of such manhood and womanhood, and rejoice that we have such an inheritance.

The veterans are every year dropping out of the ranks, and one by one their places are being left vacant; those who remain are growing every year more feeble, but their grateful country will never forget their grateful country will never forget their grateful country will never forget their praces are being left vacant; those who remain are growing every year more feeble, but their grateful coun to disagree, to respect those who differed from them.

We can best show our gratifude to the heroes of the war by living worthy of them, not by high sounding words, but maily lives; by showing our reverence for what they did for us, and then when the battle of life is ended, may we all gather together around the great throne, and hear the welcome words, "Well done, good and faithful servants."

After prayer and singing by the quar-tet, the benediction was pronounced.

About fifty members of Charles Ward Post, 62, G. A. R., and a delegation from the Woman's Relief Corps, attended the memorial services at the Congregational church at West Newton, Sunday evening. The organ and pulpit platform were beautifully decorated with flags and flowers by the Y. P. S. C. E. of that church, and two large flags were draped from the top of the arch to the platform. Rev. Henry J. Patrick, pastor of the church, opened the service with the reading of the Scriptures, and a male quartet, consisting of the Messrs. Ashenden, Rice and Rand, sang "Rock of Ages" as

THE NINTH DISTRICT.

CONGRESSMAN BURNETT AS A LEGISLA

TOR. [Washington Letter to Springfield Republican.] Congressman Burnett has been doing some serious work on his bill to raise the standard of our lard and meat products. The purpose he has in view has the approval of nearly everybody, but there are some serious legal and constitutional The purpose he has in view has the approval of nearly everybody, but there are some serious legal and constitutional difficulties in the way which require careful handling. Congress is not vested by the constitution with the supervision of food adulteration within the states, but it is authorized "to regulate commerce between the states," and it is this provision of which Mr. Burnett proposes to avail himself in framing his bill. The committee on agriculture has very properly rejected Maj Butterworth's plan of suppressing impure lard by means of taxation, according to the method of the olcomargarine bill. It is probable that the supreme court would sustain the constitutionality of the olemargarine tax on the ground that it appeared to be for the purpose of raising revenue. The court could hardly be expected to dive into the motive of the legislators or to take note of the fact that the revenue was already so excessive that plans were being devised to cut it down. Yet everybody of candor admits that the oleomargarine tax was in spirit a violation not only of the constitution, but of private right. It never would have been imposed but for the politicians' desire to catch the farmer vote. Mr. Burnett as a believer in the principies of democracy felt that he could not lend his approval to any such system as that. He proposes to establish a standard of articles for export and articles offered for sale in places exclusively under federal jurisdiction. The idea is that the public will soon demand that the article placed on the domestic market shall conform to the standard for export and that manufacturers of lard and packers of canned meats will invite federal supervision as a guaranty to the public of the quality of their products. It is expected that state legislation also will come to the assistance of the federal law in some cases. Mr. Burnett made a marked impression on the committee when he explained his plan last week, and he will do most of the practical work in drawing the bill which he reported.

Is it wise to nominate ex-Congressman of it, as they often do should use it, 2-lb, per everywhere. Try it, Ely for Congress next fall? Will he be any more likely to be successful against Congressman Burnett than he was two years ago? Are there not good, clean, able men in the district who have never been politically knocked out that it would be wiser to nominate? These are times when uncertainties should give place to certainties as much as possible.

MISFITS IN THE NINTH.

[Clinton Courant.]
On undoubted authority we learn that Congressman Burnett, of Southboro, who now represents this district in Congress, is a "mighty good fellow"—and we have a very clear impression that this brief eulogy is about the sum and substance of his representative abilities; neither he nor Judge Ely of Dedham have satisfactorily filled Massachusetts' ninth Congressional hole; neither were good political "cuts," and therefore proved to be "misfits." Whatever our varied views may be about Theodore Lyman, there was more originality and native talent in him than has been shown by either of his successors; both parties might, could and should name candidates this fall who will put the district on a solid footing, and thereby win a meritorious recognition at Washington, as well as from their deserving constituents.

What Shall we do with our Eyes?

The very important question of sight and hearing to the average man or woman seldom elicits more than a passing thought in the continual hurry to live, and acquire the necessary means to that end. Days, weeks or months may pass with more or less trouble to the sight or hearing without attracting the notice of the afflicted person, except that they are aware there is some slight impairment to either sense. The cause is never ques ettuer sense. The cause is never questioned; at last the serious fact becomes apparent that there is evidently trouble existing that rather increases as time passes. In the case of the sense of sight the often careless or perhaps fatal mistake is made, that by the adoption of some cheap eye glass this difficulty may be relieved or overcome. The primary cause is never looked into except the repeated changes of glasses forces the conviction that there is some more serious change in the eye. Then a series of experimental and often expensive medical treatments are entered upon, in very many cases with only partial or no results accomplished. What are the many causes that produce impairment of sight or hearing is asked?

In a short synopsis there are 1st: constant and intense mental application to study whether of a literary or even business nature, an overstrained, overworked brain and nerves, now so common. Various occupations. tioned; at last the serious fact bed stant and intense mental application to study whether of a literary or even business nature, an overstrained, overworked brain and nerves, now so common. Various occupatious, mechanical or otherwise, poisonous gases or impure air generated in the factories, stores, workshops, offices, etc., injuries to the brain from falls, blows on the head, sudden severe colds from changes of temperature, various forms of fevers, such as scariet fever, measles, small pox and even typhoid affecting the brain functions. Injuries to the eye from particles of metals, stone or other irritating substances entering the eye, causing violent inflammation often ending in destruction of eye ball. The hearing also becomes impaired from many of the same causes. As these two senses are of the most vital importance to all, it is strange how little care is ever given to them when impairment first presents itself. The part of wisdom should be to guard them with the most jealous care from every cause that can be judiciously guarded against, or when trouble presents itself to at once have the cause investigated by competent skilled specialists. We should renember the oft told Franklin wisdom, it is useless to lock the barn door after the horse is stolen. It seems very sad to see so many of our bright intellects impaired in their work or study from the verstrain put upon these senses. The sense of sight will not, of all our faculties, bear a long continuous strain before the powers for use become often permanently impaired. Rest your eyes more from continual strain, as you would your tired muscles, if you would retain the use to old age.

A HEARING GRANTED.

The Common Council have voted to grant a hearing on the order giving the Newton Electric Light and Power Company a three-years' contract for lighting the streets of the city. The hearing was asked for by same sixty of the leading citizens and tax-payers, who represent a respectable portion of the wealth of the city, and it was only courteous to grant their request. Nothing can be lost by a few weeks delay, and the men who pay the bills should have something to say about the way the money is to be expended, if they desire it.

The hearing is appointed for a week from next Monday evening, at 8 o'clack, and all who wish will have an opportunity of giving their advice as to the best method of lighting the streets, whether by electricity or by gas, or by both com-bined. The members of the city govern-ment are not and ought not to be parti-zans of either company, and there is no doubt but all of them are desirous of doing what will be for the best interests of the city, and to choose the cheapest and the best system of lighting. If any of them have already made up their minds on the question, the citizens who have petitioned for a hearing are reasonable men, and will listen to the reasons that have influenced the street light commit-

So far the chief reason advanced is the unsatisfactory condition of the oil lamps, by which the outlying portions of the city are lighted. Residents in those districts complain that they are not as well served as others where there are gas lamps. It is not assumed that electric lights will be cheaper, so the question of expense need not be considered. If the committee have been moved by other reasons in their recommendation, they should give the public the benefit of them. If the plan of dividing the con-tract between the gas and electric light companies is not a feasible one, the reawhy it is not can be stated, and on such an important matter, involving as Councilman Bond said, nearly $100,000, it is very desirable that there should be no hasty action and no loophole left for the imputing of unworthy motives.

The members of our City Council have always shown themselves willing to listen to public opinion and have never ar-rogated to themselves any absolute pow-er, or claimed that they were above pub-lic opinion, as school boards sometimes Perhaps the more frequent election of the members and the opportunity of promotion which the council affords has a good deal to do with this, but the fact number who would reunite the party and give it every hope of success in the that such is the case. The majority rule, campaign. and when the majority is so intelligent as in Newton, it is always the wisest course to yield to its wishes. The memcourse to yield to its wisnes. The members of the council are simply the servants of the people, and if they are strongly in favor of any project, they have only to mould public opinion to the form they desire, to carry out their plans. That is not always an easy task, and it cannot be done without some effort. If this matter had been more fully discussed in public before the order was presented, there would probably have been less opposition, but it must be confessed that the people were taken somewhat by surprise. They had had no intimation that Alderman Ward and Councilman Gore, for instance, had changed from the posi-tion they took a year ago, when both were the leading opponents of electric lights. The change was such a radical one that the people wanted time to think it over, and perhaps after the hearing they may come to the same opinion as that held by the two gentlemen men-tioned. Frequent hearings on public matters are only an approximation to the old form of town government, where there was a hearing and sometimes a very tedious one on every question that came up. And that one is asked for only the control of the c shows that the tax-payers have a vi tal interest in city affairs. No discourtesy is intended, and those who have asked for the hearing are working for the same end as the street light committee, the best good of the city.

passed of late years. It is expected to largely reduce the legitimate expenses of conducting a campaign, and to render unnecessary the usual large campaign fund, which is so difficult to raise, and more difficult still to account for. Under the bill the ballots will be printed by the State and not by political committees not come from a doubtful State.

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC, tees, and the ward rooms will be free from solicitors. so that the voters will from solicitors. so that the voters will not have to run the gauntlet of a dozen or more politicians. In passing such a bill the Legislature has furnished a suf-ficient excuse for the long session, and in this as in other respects, the character of the legislation this year has been much above the average. The Newton Representatives have taken an active part in the important matters that have come up, and they have been on the right side, both with their votes and with their influence. The city has good reason to be satisfied with its representatives, it will be fortunate if both Messrs. Walworth and Slocum can be induced to accept another term.

George William Curtis, in his elo-quent address upon the prospects of civil service reform, finds that President Cleveland's ambition for a second term has stood in the way of his success as a reformer, and he advocates a constitu-tional amendment that would prohibit a second term, as the only way of making reform in the civil service effective. John Quincy Adams, he finds, was the only President who successfully withstood the spoils system, but by doing so he lost all chance of a second term. If Mr. Cleveland had followed Mr. Adams' example he would not have been reelected, but he would have gained a more favor-able place in history, although in the eyes of politicians he would have made eyes or ponticans ne would have made himself ridiculous. There is every pros-pect that with a good candidate, the Re-publicans can win back the believers in civil service reform, who have found themselves deceived in President Cleye-

THERE has been considerable talk in some of the papers about Col. Haskell of Newton, as a candidate for Congress in this district. If Mr. Burnet would only retire, both parties might nominate Col. Haskell of Newton, and then whether Col. Haskell of the Herald, or Col. E. H. Haskell, formerly of the Republican State committee, were elected, we should have an excellent representative in Washington. The outside papers have Washington. The outside papers have already got these two gentlemen so badly mixed, that most of them would evi-dently be unable to tell which was which, even after the campaign had got-ten under full headway. The mistakes ten under full headway. The mistakes made already have been very amusing to those who know which Col. Haskell had been talked of, and which for which party he had been proposed as a candidate.

JAMES P. FOSTER of the New York Republican League has sent out a confidential circular, which unfortunately has been published. In the circular he makes an appeal for funds for campaign purposes, and says that the manufactur-ers ought to be liberal, as they are "get-ting practically the sole benefit of the tariff laws," and that they are making "large fortunes every year when times are prosperous," by means of it. Mr. Foster owes an explanation to the public, as what he says confidentially is only what the wicked free traders have been so harshly criticized for saying publicly. He should at once deny that he ever signed his name to such a circular, and swear that it was a trick of the Cobden

MR. BLAINE appreciates the situation much better than his superserviceable friends. After his Florence letter, for him to have accepted a nomination, or lowed his special friends to have secured it for him, would have been as he says, "paltering in a double sense with my words" and guilty of "indirection." If his last letter had been written first, there would have been no room for mis-understanding, and it proves that Mr. Blaine can write a plain and easily un-derstood declination when he desires to do so. The field is now open for the other candidates, of whom there are a number who would reunite the party

THERE is one thing on which the Common Council deserves to be congratulat ed, and that is the promptness with which their meetings are called together and the expeditious manner with which the business of the meeting is de-spatched. It is generally possible for the members to catch the 8.07 o'clock train after the meeting adjourns, while with the aldermen, the members are lucky if they get a nine o'clock train.

The English Sparrow at Home.

There has been so much dis cussion of late over the English sparrow, that our readers may be interested in seeing what is thought of him at home.

that our readers may be interested in seeing what is thought of him at home. Miss Ormerod, the English entomologist, read a paper in London the other day, in which she declared herself very emphatically against the sparrow as a pest to the farmer. Taking a broad view of the state of affairs all over the country, she observed, they saw an increase of passer domesticus (to distinguish him clearly from his harmless namesake the hedge sparrow), and they also saw an increase of farm insects. Besides the downright mischief to corn and other things tarmers were suffering now, and would suffer severely unless the matter was taken in hand, by the sparrow driving away the truly insectivorous birds, and notably the martin. The numbers of this bird were demonstrably lessening, and if the proportion of caterpillars that the sparrow lovers to be such an important help to us it must be a very much more important evil to have the martin driven away which destroyed the perfect insects by legions just when they were about to lay their eggs. They had, Miss Ormerod said, a strong warning before them in the United States of the mischief following the unchecked multiplication of the English sparrow; and she estimated the total loss from insect ravages in farm crops and fruit farming, and among farm stock at from £8,00,000 to £10,000,000 per annum.

Certain glassware merchants of Tremont street, Boston, have protested against the practice of firing salutes on the Common averring that their stock of goods is more or less shaken and shattered thereby. But Mayor O'Brien has decided that a salute may be fired there next week in honor of the revels of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. Boston is resolved to make a noise in the world even if she doesn't lay up a cent; and if the glassware is all smashed she will drink out of the bottle.—[N. Y. Sun.

A Washington newspaper says that a few days ago, at the races, Senators Ingalls and Blackburn were in the club house having a pleasant time with edibles, when Colonel Jim Williams, the Kentucky horseman, hove in sight. "Well," he said, with more vigor than appears in this print, "are you fellows friends." I thought you were thirsting for each other's blood." "Oh,no; we are friends," laughed Senator Blackburn, "ain't we?" turning to Mr. Ingalls. "Yes," replied the Senator from Kansas, with that peculiar edge which shows through every tone; "Oh, yes; we are friends—here."

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Boyden gave a musical at their residence on Edinboro street, Friday evening, which proved a most enjoyable occasion. A Protest Against Liberality.

I should think one kind of Millenim had already begun, when a Methodst minister who believes that a man mist be born again or he cannot see the kig-dom of God, will exchange pulpits with a Universalist minister who believesall men will be saved, whatever their sprit-ual condition may be. I have bee a member of an Evangelical church in Newton for many years, whose creedets forth man as wholly deprayed and lst, and Christ as the all and only atomg forth man as wholly deprayed and ist, and Christ as the all and only atong sacrifice for sin, and the renewing ofthe heart by the Holy Ghost as the only ay by which we are made heirs of God, nd joint heirs with Jesus Christ. This cred I most heartily accept, and I don't that any pastor of any Evangelical chrch has any right to invite a Unitarian or Universalist, whose beliefs are varly different from ours, to occupy his pupit or to teach his people. Perhaps teir sermons on such occasions might nc be very different from his own; but hey have enlisted under one banner and unother. One is salvation by good work the other God's mercy without man's respentance. The banner I enlisted under is the blood-stained banner of Calvary's cross. I should object as much to having the foreign banners raised over the City Hall in New York. Their belief may answer for them, and they have as much right to their's as I to mine. But mine suits me best, and I claim the right to be under its teachings, and don't care to have the other forced upon me. This wholesale liberality and union of all denominations that is so much talked about is wholly on the side of the Evangelical churches. I say this to our shame; we don't see the others coming over to us, but there seems to be a tendency on our part to go over to them. Let us remember the diying words of Dr. Tyng of New York, which were, "Stand up for Jesus, and let us stand like men and women who have found a rock to stand upon, and not be ashamed of our colors."

"No; partly, though. I've fallen into ill-luck, I thought I had some money in an inner compartment of my purse and—it;s not there!"

You've spent it?" "Certainly not! That is, I suppose I must have."

"And what have you in the outside compartments of your purse?' asked Tiff, lazily fanning herself and putting her two dainty feet on the hassock. The only answer Thwaite seemed likely to make was to begin feeling of all his pockets.

"Hey?" said Tiff.

"Why, none there now," answered Thwaite, shortly, as of course, he hadn't. "Good gracious!" said Tiff, snapping "Good gracious" said Tiff, snapping her bracelet, "how unusual, isn't it?"

"Why, yes, that's what troubles me; I never was out of cash in all my life before this."
"Are'nt there such things as checks?" asked Mrs. Thwaite, turning her eyes upon him lovingly.
Thwaite langhed.
"I should think so! But then I have'nt any about me."
"There so many banks. Where do you cash your checks?"
"When I have them," said Thwaite, going to the mantel-piece to light a cigar, "I cash'em at the first bank I come to,"

"Perhaps if you go to a bank they'll give you a check to cash," said she.
"No, hardly."
"Are int there such things as accounts at banks?"
"Tiff why not?"

"Heavens, Tiff, why not?"
"Well, then, go to the bank where you have one."

Her husband took his zigar from his lips, growing pale.
"What the deuce am I to do? I have

Mrs. Thwaite shook out a fold of her dress with a gentle wave of the hand. Her husband was again staring fixedly into the desert of his dilemma. She rose, and going to him, laid that graceful hand of hers upon his shoulder. "What difference can it make?" said she—"about money I mean? Something will happen. Perhaps you have money in your trunk. It is quite funny to think of two people who care about each other as we do, talking so much about such a thing."

rreshments, diplomacy; a governor with the money, a dread of being sent to Europe.

Tiff was as fresh as a rose the next day. She popped her head out of the window, and sniffed the air.

"How perfectly sweet it is this morning?" said, she. "I mean to wear my gray line."

"Where are you going?" asked Huff.
She turned slowly, and gazed at him.

"Oh, yes, I do remember now. No breakfast."

"It is too, too cruel, my love," says he, leaning against anything he could find, in despair. "But I shall go to a place or two of business I know of, and get something profitable to do at once. Upon my word I will soon be back, fully equipped for a hearty lunch. As you say, nothing serious can befall two happy young beings like you and me."

Off he went into the sunshine, and Tiff sat down demurely, curious to find out what would happen next.

She had to wait till evening for that "next thing" unless a series of strange phases feeling could be counted as interesting. It was then that Huf Thwaite burst into the room, his face gleaming whitely in the dim light.

"Tiff! oh, Tiff!"

She did not answer, but in a moment slowly raised herself from the sofa, here

"Tift! oh, Tift!"

She did not answer, but in a moment slowly raised herself from the sofa, her hand to her forhead.

"My child, are you famished?" exclaimed her husband, with glistening eyes.

"Only-very dizzy," whispered Tiff, faintly, winking rapidly, and panting in the greatest trouble. "Where am 1? What have we been doing?"

"Oh, my dear, I have been up and down the city all day, finally securing a capital connection with father's rival insurance company; but by the beard of Moses! I have had nothing but a glass of wine and a biscuit since last night. As soon as I was fairly launched in business this afternoon, I realized that of course I could not expect to receive any cash the first day, and I became almost wild with anxiety. Yet it was imperative to smile. Do you not know that it is imperative in business to smile?"

"I don't care if it is!" retorted Tiff, with some show of life. "And you should care more that I am very, very ill. I have read Hugo until I am as hungry as a giantess."

"But, Tiff, I have one profound hope in this terrible dilemma, in which it now seems as if we should literally starve uness my hope should prove well grounded. Have you not any money?"

Mrs. Thwaite threw her head back daintily, shrugged her shoulders in mockery, her pale lips smilling, her lustrous eyes glancing scornfully over her husband's head.

"Do not keep me waiting for your answer," he cried, kneeling before her.

"Do not keep me waiting for your answer," he cried, kneeling before her.
"Why, certainly I have money," answered she. "How could I have pin money else? Huff, you are beyond your depth, I think."

money else? Huff, you are beyond your depth, I think."

"Bravo, we are saved!" exclained Thwaite, springing up and waltzing a few steps with his cane. Then stopping, he asked, "How came you not to mention it at once, last evening? Give me your purse without delay, dearest Tiff, and let us start at once for our pretty little table at the restaurant."

Tiff walked over to the encouraging figure in the middle of the room, her hands behind her sloping waist.

"Huff Thwaite," she demanded, "do you mean to say you would use my pin money to support us?"

"I say we're in a deuced fix, and any money would be rather acceptable. Haven't you pins enough? Or are you in a condition to starve another 24 hours?"

"Huff Thwaite, I never could have be.

money would be rather acceptable. Haven't you pins enough? Or are you in a condition to starve another 24 hours?"

"Huff Thwaite, I never could have believed it."

"What?"

"That you could not take care of me."
She began to cry, and spent all the tears she had longed to shed during the day. but would not shed them because Huff was taking care of her.

He was wretchedly hungry. His pulse was awfully high, or low, he did not know which; and as for his wife, she might die before morning for want of an oyster patty. Upon the top of these dire facts lay the purse in her pocket or upper drawer. He was deeply angered. Something whirled around in his heart, and sent the blood to his forehead, and he bit his lips before he knew that he was inclined to. He sat down in a bowed position, his thumbs in his pockets. He heard the light pattering of a spring shower in the gathering darkness, and he also heard his wife feeling about in the next room, turning a key and coming back to where he sulked. She said "Here!" dramatically. He looked up and saw a pretty purse before his nose. The next moment Tiff Thwaite was looking at her husband in blank dismay. Huff had risen with a bitter and graceful elegance and the purse had skimmed through a pane of the window with a tinkling crash.

Tiff turned to the sofa, and threw herself down at full length, gloriously

Tiff turned to the sofa, and threw herself down at full length, gloriously wretched.

Huff vanished. He went out into the drizzling rain to hunt for the purse. He struck matches that sizzled, and was several times on the point of being run over by vehicles, and there is scarcely any doubt that his misfortunes were further augmented by the use of words after which the faithful hissorian draws an exclamation mark and supplies by a blank. All in a moment, however, he thought he had stepped on a mouse, and then he knew that he had come upon the plush wallet. In the hall he opened it hastily, expecting to find perhaps a few gold pieces; but his luck was far better than he had expected. What could Tiff have been thinking flots flave profited by her pin-money, supposing that they had both starved.

In a couple of hours more Tiff's headache had gone off like mist, and they both looked even gayer than before the terrible ordeal of that day had set in.

At 9 o'clock there came a knock at the door. The servant stepped over to Mrs. Thwaite, and said something in a low voice. Mrs. Thwaite replied in the same manner. Who could have supposed that there would be a serious sequel to such a slight occurrence? When the servant had withdrawn, says Tiff, "Please, Huff, hand me $5."

"Certainly, Tiff. But on second thoughts, remember how careful we must be for a month."

"I wish you would reflect that the laundress must be paid," as we do, talking so much about such a thing."

"That's all very fine," Thwaite murmured; "but what are we to do for breakfast?"

"Breakfast?—breakfast?"

"Pes; and we shall break on it, according to present indications."

"Pshaw! I'm sure I can do without it just for once," Hiff assured him, almost laughing.

He meditated, convinced that he could not get along without it, even for once; and, although he had just heavily dined, he began to feel symptoms of hunger. The imagination is everything.

"Papa says you must be married over again; go through the form and all he show and importance, "remarked Esthr, with the most fascinating, lazy nonchilance. "He said he never saw anything go off so like cotton into flames as you did, brother; just as though any one ws more in love with your Bessie Feathery than he was. He don't remember febidding the marriage at all."

"Please to tell my father," said Huf, severely, looking down at his wife, who held her chin in her hand, "that I remember his forbidding it (or as bad is forbidding it) very distinctly. And please add that from this time forth my father, yes, and all the rest of you, is—are—dead to me!"

"Dreadful words those, Will." sighed his sister, glancing up with compressed lips. "Don't you think so, Bessie?"

Mrs. Tiff shook her head and smiled. "Mr. Thwaite is never in the wrong," says she, and feels a little awkward at her own assertion.

Esther thought a minute, and then said she believed she would not stay any longer just now. Huff said that he would see her home, and then reflected that he could not very well carry out his intention. Esther upon this explained that she had come in the carriage. When she had bowed herself through the open door, she stopped to throw over her shoulder a roulade of genial laughter.

soft cushions. Tiff was alert inopening the window, and then running to Esther's side, finding her, however, a little less faint, her eyes looking rajidly from one to the other as the two sympathetic young people bent toward her.

"Dear sister," sobbed Tiff, 'has something terrible happened?"

"My father," said the white-faced girl, in low tones, shutting her eyes.

"Eather! father!" cried Tiwaite, deep ly agitated, and clutching his sister's hands in a firmer grasp. "What news of

"Dead!"

The young couple sankon either side."

"Dead!"
The young couple sankon either side of Esther, crushed and horrified. Without opening her eyes, Esther spoke on: "When I told him him how you received the loving messages, brother Will, in oue moment—" Thwaite's distress was agonizing. Esther stopped speaking, cpened her eyes and leaned forwarl eagerly.
"Was it right to be so harsh and unyielding to your own father, Will?"
Her brother had withdrawn to the other side of the room, his face buried in his arms against the wall.
"Oh, Esther, have we no hope?" Tiff sobbed.
"Why, yes, there is hope in this case,"

"Did you? I thought you alwaydid." I mean, of course, the laundrieones she had brought."
"Weren't they just right?"
"Huff, you are getting obtuse. Stook them in payment."

"I wish my mother would come now," and it's fafter the door had closed upon her husband's buoyant sister—who was also a school friend—and after a panse, or something equivalent to one. Huff had not descended to the carriage with Miss Thwaite, for fear of catching sight of the world dreaded grin on the footman's visage.

"Your mother is a woman, dear," answered Thwaite, as if that meant something unusual, "and it will take a long time for her to come round as my father has done."

But you are unrelenting as you can be," suggested Tiff.

Huff would liked to have said that as a young husband he could not be otherwise than he was, but as he felt that this might be too brilliant a revelation for Tiff, he remained silent.

In the evening they were sitting, as was customary, in the cheerful blue-tired room. Huff feeling very cosy and aloof from the world and annoying restives, and remembering his day's ocupation in the rival insurance office as fit were a dream.

The door was opened hastily, and a figure presented itself which dashed tier united calm to atoms.

"Doubtless God could make a better berry than the strawberry, but doubtless God never did."

Thus spoke the celebrated Berkeley, to whom even the sarcastic Pope ascribed "every virtue under heaven." The good Bishop could never have realized what a wonderful improvement the skill of the gardener would produce during the century following his remark. An improvement, however, confined to size and appearance, for the fragrance and delicacy of the wild fruit is unexcelled, and seldom equalled by its more pretentious cultivated brethren. The strawberry belongs to the rose family, which gives us the majority of our most common and most prized fruits. Fruit which ordinarily means in Botany, the ripened seed vessel. In the strawberry, we incidentally eat the fruit, but intentionally eat the juicy thickened end of the flower stalk, which has the real fruit scattered over its surface in the shape of the little seeds which are hardly noticed.

One of our most abundant weeds is the little Field Sorrel, or Sheep Sorrel as it is sometimes called. It is well known to the boys, as its pleasantly acid leaves are very grateful to these omniverous animals, and particularly so, as they are very effective in quenching thirst. For boys of an older growth, they make a very tasty addition to a salad, when used in judicious proportion to the other ingredients. The presence of sorrel indicates that the soil is fertile in the inverse ratio to its abundance, for it grows best in dry, hard grounds. The flowers have no petals; the stamens and pistils are borne on separate plants, and the wind is the agent of fertilization, for no sweet lowing insect would ever be stupid enough to expect to find anything adaptated to his taste, in these inconspicuous greenish flowers. In fact we shall seldom find that insects are useful to the plants which bear unattractive blossoms; showing that while nature is lavish in her productive energies, she seldom makes use o

Meeting of the Board of Health.

The board of health met in the aldermen's room, Tuesday afternoon, Mayor Kimball in the chair

A petition from Mr. F. H. Forbes, relative to a defective cesspool, was referred to the agent of the board with full powers.

A communication from Mr. Bruce R.
Ware by his attorney, Jesse C. Ivy, which was addressed to the city council and referred to the board of health, was received. Attention was called to a nuisance on Bennington street, caused by imperfect drainage and resourching its imperfect drainage and requesting its abatement.

Alderman Nickerson stated that in his opinion a drain was necessary to take off opinion a drain was necessary to take off the surface water. He was in favor of having it done, and should bring the subject to the attention of the highway committee at its next meeting. If the drain was put in he thought it would remedy all difficulty.

By vote of the board, Agent French was requested to write to Mr. Ware or his counsel, stating that the communication had been received, and that the matter of draining the street would be brought to the attention of the highway committee.

WANTED THE BROOK FILLED.

A petition was received from Patrick Murphy et als, requesting the filling up of a brook situated on North street, in land owned by Messrs. Henry Breck and Farwell. There was no means of draining the water and it stands still throughout the year. Attention was further called to night soil emptied there, considered unhealthy during hot weather by the residents of that portion of the city. The matter was referred to the agent with instructions to report a plan to remedy the trouble at the next meeting of the board.

The agent was of the opinion that the brook could be lowered so as to make it a running stream without large expenditure.

Alderman Nicksyson augusted autitue.

Alderman Nickerson suggested putting in a drain to the river, and thought it would take off all the surface water from the low land in that section.

A petition was referred from Mr. C. F. Eddy for permit to keep four pigs in his barn on Washington street, and two cows in his stable on Cherry street.

FUMIGATION.

FUMIGATION.

Agent French asked for instructions in regard to cases where fumigation was necessary. He alluded to a recent case of diphtheria in a house where one child had died and another was sick with the disease, and stated that he had notified the father that he desired to take the fumigation of the house as soon as the other child had sufficiently recovered. He had subsequently made arrangements with Mr. Bailey of Boston to fumigate the house at an expense of $5.50. The physician who had charge of the case told the father that all that was done by the experts was to burn a quantity of sulphur and he could do this himself. He has burn sulphur in the house and does not feel now like paying for having it done. Mr. French desired to know whether he should cancel the engagement with Mr. Bailey and also whether he shall recommend said Bailey to persons who are able to pay for fumigating their houses when it becomes necessary by the presence of contagious diseases. In this particular case, he felt that it is very necessary that the house should be thoroughly fumigated and that private individuals cannot do it so well as parties experienced in such matters.

The case in question was referred to the agent with full power.

It was voted that when the board adjourned, it be to meet next Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of going about the city and examining such places as in judgment may be deemed necessary.

considerable damage was done to the lawn and garden of Capt. Downes, although it could hardly be avoided under the circumstances.

THE STREET LIGHT HEARING.

When the petition for a hearing on the Street Light question came up, which was granted by the common council and the time set for next Monday night, Al-derman Johnson inquired if the board had anything to do with it, the order the contract having passed the Alderman Childs said that the privilege of a hearing should be accorded when 58 citizens asked for it, and moved that the board concur with the lower branch and agree to a hearing next Mon-ny night. Alderman Ward said he favored hav ing a hearing, as it was a good plan to have all the light possible, and if any citizens could give any information of value, he would be glad to have it. The committee had examined the question with great care, and something should certainly be done soon, as the old con-tract was out on June 1st, and the city was paying a high price for the present

Alderman Johnson said he opposed the granting of a hearing, as the committee were perfectly competent to act on the matter. The majority of the petitioners were stockholders of the Gas company. The committee had had the matter under consideration for six months, and they were entitled to consideration and to confidence. He did not care any more for the stockholders of one company than those of the other, and he did not see any good reason for granting a hearing whenever any important matter came up, for the purpose of educating members of the council in the way they ought to vote.

Alderman Childs said that the more he thought over the proposed contract the more he was convinced that it was not what was wanted in Newton. The Thompson-Houston company is furnishing are lights in other places for $90, just as good as we pay $120 for. In Manchester, for instance, they are furnishing are lights just like those we have, for $80, and in some places for less. The majority of the petitioners were not stockholders in the gas company. He cared nothing for the Gas company and less for the Electric Light company, but some of the gentlemen on the petition had spent much more time in investigating the matter than the members of the committee, and if they had anything to propose that would be better for Newton, it was worth while to hear what they had to say. The Electric Light company wont charge any more for their are lights the rest of the year than they are charging now, and certainly the Gas company would not, so that there was no need of any haste.

The board then voted to concur with the common council, and to join them in the public hearing next Monday night. stockholders in the gas company. He Alderman Pettee presented the petition of C. H. Bakeman and 45 others for a public playround for boys on the Dudley field in the Upper Falls; referred to Park committee.

PETER R. MULLEN'S CHARACTER.

Peter R. Mullen presented a petition for a hearing on his application for appointment as policeman. In 1886 he took the civil service examination and stood second, but he was not appointed. In March, 1888, he again took the examination in which he stood the highest, and was certified for appointment. He had understood that the reason he failed for an appointment was because the city marshal had written to the Mayor, charging him with having been drunk on several occasions. This was not true, and as it affected his character as a special policeman, he asked for an examination and thought he was entitled to it.

Alderman Pettee said that he had seen Mr. Mullen that afternoon, and he had feit that he was shadowed by the supposed letter, which he had never seen, but the publicity the matter had received from an announcement in one of the Newton papers, had caused him great trouble, and he was anxious to know if such a charge could be proved against Mullen was a strictly temperate man, or drank all night, as it had nothing to do with the case.

Alderman Pettee said that he was satisfied that the alleged letter had no influence with the police committee in making the appointment.

Alderman Johuson said that he and Alderman Tyler were the members of the police committee, and neither of them had seen any such letter; the committee had taken all things into consideration in making their appointment, and after a careful investigation had appointed Mr. Soule as the best man for the place, so that the letter had had no effect upon the appointment.

Alderman Ward said that he was satisfied that the police committee had acted fairly and honorably in the matter. The committee had chosen the man they thought best fitted for the place, and he did not see what there was to investigate. If all unsuccessful applicants should demand an investigation it would give the board more than they could do. No action was required in the case, and he moved to lay the petition on the table, which was done.

EX-ALDERMAN BARNES.

Mayor Kimball said that he had a painful duty to perform in notifying the board of the death of ex-Alderman Barnes, who had been a member of the first common council and for 5 years an aldermen, and it was due to his faitful service to the city that the board should take some notice of his death. "Alderman Childs moved that a committee be appointed to draw up appropriate resolutions, and Mayor Kimball appointed Aldermen Childs and Tyler as such committee. Later in the evening they reported the following EX-ALDERMAN BARNES

The hearing on the petition for the laying out and acceptance of Grasmere street, from Washington street to Hunnewell avenue was then opened, but no one appeared, and an order was passed for the laying out of the street, no damages being claimed by the abutters.

The petitions for new fire alarm signal oxes on Homer street, and corner Jewboxes on Homer street, and corner Jew-ett and Boyd streets, were referred, on motion of Alderman Pettee, to the next city government, with the recommenda-tion that the cost of putting them up should be included in next year's appro-mistions.

but the publicity the matter had received from an announcement in one of the Newton papers, had caused him great trouble, and he was anxious to know if such a charge could be proved against him. Mr. Pettee moved that it be referred to the committee on police.

Alderman Johnson said that the police committee had had the matter before them once, when the three successful applicants were being considered. This man had not been appointed, and he did not see the use of the committee again considering the matter.

Alderman Pettee said that if it was a defamation of character, and if the city marshal wrote what were not the facts, Mr. Mullen would have the right perhaps to call the Marshal into court and meet him face to face, but the trouble was that Mr. Mullen did not have a copy of the letter, and for that reason he wanted a hearing.

OFFICIAL ANALYSIS OF BAKING POW-DERS-ADULTERATIONS IN CREAM OF TARTAR.

Under the direction of the New York State Board of Health, eighty-four different kinds of baking powders embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the State, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C. F. Chandler, a member of the State Board of Health, assisted by Prof. Edward G. Love, the well-known United States Government chemist.

The official report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum or lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar was also analyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities; in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent. of their entire weight.

This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar (specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. #### STREET LIGHTING.

WHAT THE ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY

The question of lighting the streets having been assigned a public hearing, it would seem in order for the benefit of the city council and the citizens that the Newton Electric Light & Power Com-pany make a precise and authentic de-scription of just how they would carry out this enterprise should the contract be awarded to them, and they have fur-be awarded to them, and they have furnished the following:

They say that it will then be found that the majority of the objections which have been raised against electric lighting are due to an incomplete knowledge of the facts

OUTSIDE CONSTRUCTION.

Four circuits or eight wires will be started from the central station, running but two wires in each of four different directions. These wires will be supportenon the poles already existing, and are termed the trunk wires. They will be slightly larger than those now in use, and so strong as not to break without great difficulty.

CIRCUITS.

Branching from the trunk wires in different places will be thirty-five cir-cuits of much smaller wire, (No. 10,) on each of which will be cut in about forty incandescent lamps in series.

POSTS.

This wire will be supported mainly up-

POLES.

Between the posts when necessary, will be set a small ornamental hard pine pole, and* similiar to those now used in Brookline, Mass.

TREES.

Where the wire is obliged to pass through trees, a special insulator, Figs. 2 and 3, will be used. This insulator is lashed to a branch, and consists of two grooved glass rollers mounted on a malleable iron frame. The wire passes freely between the rollers, thus allowing the branch to sway back and forth with the wind without straining the wire, abraiding the insulation or injuring the tree. WIRE INSULATION.

The wire used will be so thoroughly insulated as to prevent loss of current or danger to shock, as shown by the following extract from a letter dated April 25,

"Yesterday a painter at work in the City Hall, Pittsburg, fell from the scaffold where he was working, and in falling caught hold of our live alternating current wires No. 1, Simplex Insulation, and held on without receiving any injury or shock, until taken down by a ladder. This speaks well for the Simplex Insulation, and at the same time indicates that the alternating current is not so deadly as some people would like to make it appear. The workman undoubtedly owes his life to our overhead lines, and to the good quality of the insulation on the wires.

LAMPS.

Each of the existing lamp posts will be fitted up with two independent lamps so arranged that by the aid of a simple and reliable device, the second lamp will light automatically when the first gives out, thus assuring a constant light. See Fig. 4.

REFLECTORS. Above each pair of lamps is an opal reflector designed to throw the light up and down the street, and receive the name of the street in painted letters.

EXTENSION ARMS.

The lamps will be carried out into the street from behind the trees, on an iron extension arm as shown in Fig. 1.

LANTERNS.

No lanterns of any kind are used to obstruct the light with dirty panes of INSIDE CONSTRUCTION-LAMP INDICATORS. The trunk wires will be carried through delicate instruments which indicate the number of lamps that are burning and instantly show and locate any group of lamps that may fail to burn.

SWITCH BOARD.

The wires and instruments are attached to a switch board so arranged that any system of trunk wires are to be immediately switched on to any dynamo. Should any accident happen to a dynamo a spare one can be switched on its place.

FIRE.

Every precaution will be taken at the station against fire. It is proposed to lay a concrete floor, keep two lines of fire hose attached to the station pump and street main, and men constantly on duty. The wires will be run directly out of doors from the switch board placed against the side of the building. We do not fear any fire from the electric current, as the alternating current can not draw an arc to set a fire, as the direct current used by Edison and others will. Eire can only come from outside sources.

DANGER.

A shock from the alternating current of 1000 volts tension used by us is not fatal to human life.

Som e three months ago our head lineman carelessly took hold of two primary wires, one in each hand. He received the full pressure of the current but sustained no damage other than two burned hands, which did not prevent him from doing work the next day. The wire was Underwiters with practically no insulation.

Some time later another employee closed an open circuit of 1000 volts tension through his thumb placed on bare brass. He sustained no damage other than a burnt thumb and a good shaking up. We have also had many other instances which could be cited as showing the harmless nature of the current. LIGHTING.

The lighting of the entire city will be done almost instaneously. Should it become suddenly dark on a so-called moonlight night, on goes the light by turning a switch at the station.

Each circuit of lamps being connected in series insures absolute uniformity of the light; the lamps beaming as brightly five miles from the station as in it, so that Upper Falls and Chestnut Hill will be as well lighted as Newton Corner.

RELIABILITY.

Our incandescent street lamps have burned in the streets of Watertown two miles from the station for over eight con-secutive months without the slightest

In choosing a system reliability is by far the chief disideration, not lamps per horse power. The more perfect and thoroughly built the apparatus, the less number of employes are required to care for it. Thirty per cent of our running expenses goes for salaries and wages, and it is chiefly by increasing the business and running more lamps per employe that the cost of electric lighting can be reduced.

IMPROVEMENTS.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Two thirds of the cost of construction is for copper, engines and boilers, fron posts and labor, on none of which can we expect either improvement or reduced prices within three years.

The cost for fuel rarely exceeds 25 per cent of the running expenses when depreciation and interest on the capital are added, and in our present case is as low as 12 per cent.

That is to say, could the electrical apparatus be so wonderfully improved that we would have no coal to pay for, our running expenses would only be reduced about 12 per cent.

MONOPOLY.

The lighting of the streets of Newton by electricity is the key to the general introduction of interior electric lighting, for which there is a large and rapidly increasing demand.

The dividing of the street lighting between the Gas and Electric companies has the following objections.

1st. Portions of the city lighted by gas, exclusive of electricity, cannot be supplied with interior electric lighting for want of poles and wires which it would not pay to set up for house-lighting alone.

2d. The gas lif portions of the city would be alone in darkness on suddenly clouded moonlight nights, while the electric portions would be brilliantly lighted. This would create local dissatisfaction and be an incomplete system of lighting.

The awarding of the entire street lighting to the Electric company so far from being a monopoly brings gas and electricity into active competition for the bulk of the lighting, namely, houses in every part of the city.

The past history of the Newton and Watertown Gas Light Company most clearly shows that this competition would have more effect on the regulation of prices than to trust to a reduction of gas rates promised by increased business free from electrical competition.

West Newton, June 2, 1888 Last week we mentioned that fruit would be a subject which would interest us later, and now we find we have nothing but fruit to talk about.

The skill of the gardener has for so many centuries been exerted on the first four members of our list, that they are all very much changed from their natural condition, and in these cases man has certainly improved on nature. Pliny notes the fact that in his time the Romans cultivated 22 varieties of the apple and 30 varieties of the pear. The cherry came from the southern shore of the Black Sea, and takes its botanical name from Cerasus, a city of ancient Pontus whose cherry trees were noted more than two thousand years ago. Persia was probably the early home of the Peach.

We will not undertake any horticultur We will not undertake any horticultur-al essay, for the study of fruits or iflow-ers as modified by man's agency, is out-side of the plan we proposed. Men have taken advantage of nature's willingness to move in certain directions and work changed its course.

The botanist studies out the plan, and tells us that the luscious pear and rosy apple are formed on different models, from the velvety peach and glistening cherry. In the first case, the sepals are united into a tube enclosing the seed ves-sels; gradually the outer wall expands, and the space between the inner and outer wall of the tube fills with a growth of woody tissue and vegetable acids; in the process of ripening a chemical change sets in, which turns both acids and woody tissue into a sugary pulp. In the apple and the pear, we eat the thickened calyx, and throw away the core, which contains the real fruit of the tree.

At first sight it seems hardly possible that the cherry, peach, walnut and butternut are all modifications of the same simple scheme. Nature, like a skilled musician, takes a single theme, and weaves it into endless variations; all beautiful, all different, and yet through all runs the melody of some well known tune, which forms the web of the harmonious whole. This single theme in plant building is the leaf. Stem, branch, twigs, thorns, tendrils, the flower in all its parts, the fruit, are all but transformations of the leaf. The leaf melody has but three notes, yet what wonderful variations has the Great Composer formed upon them. The leaf consists of a fibrous framework, a pulp, and a covering for the whole. As one note or another becomes the clearest, the effect changes. The fibrous framework becomes twig or thorn the clearest, the effect changes. The fibrous framework becomes a store of food as in the acorn, the horse chestnut and the pea, or as seen in still another form, in the onion or the hyacinth. The most attractive and delightful of all the variations is when the leaf is transformed into the various parts of the flower. The strangest feature of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the performance is the flower than the flower of the flower of

The difference, then, between the apple and the peach, consists in this; the apple is a transformed calyx; the peach is a transformed pisul; and both are transformed leaves.

The raspberry and thimbleberry consist of collections of close packed peachlike, or rather cherry-like fruits, growing on a dome-shaped flower stalk. In the blackberry we have a combination of the strawberry plan and the cherry plan; the same thickened and juicy end of the flowers stalk exists, but instead of dry seeds, it carries a collection of tiny cherry-like fruit.

2d. The gas lit portions of the city would be alone in darkness on suddenly clouded moonlight nights, while the electric portions would be brilliantly lighted. This would create local disastisfaction and be an incomplete system of lighting.

The awarding of the entire street lighting to the Electric company so far from being a monopoly brings gas and electricity into active competition for the bulk of the lighting, namely, houses in every part of the city.

care or nutriment takes place. Even the apple and the pear give us a glimpse at the ancient primeval form, by the large thorns which they produce when left to themselves for years in some abandoned farm or garden.

Is it strauge that our beautiful neighbors should show the same tendency as ourselves, and develop unpleasant traits and dispositions when left to themselves, without restraining influences or loving care? As we suggested in our first article: the gulf between men and plants may not be so world wide as we have long been taught.

THAT GUARANTEED CIRCULATION.

The Newton Journal, last week, an-The Newton Journal, last week, announced that its "paid circulation" was "guaranteed to be, at least, more than double that of all the publications combined, published in this city." This is rather hard on the High School Review and the Graphic, as, if true, it would make their combined circulation something less than 800. We do not know what kind of a guarantee is given, but if payment for advertisements depends on this guarantee, we should advise its advertisers to call for proof of the statevertisers to call for proof of the statement before they pay any bills.

To enable the Journal to furnish this proof, we will join it in a request to have all the postmasters in Newton give a sworn statement of the number of would establish the truth of the matter, if the Journal means by "paid circulation" its subscription list. We should, for our part, be willing to give any postmaster a handsome addition to his salar who should find that he received in city affairs. Besides, a man who owns more Journals weekly than GRAPHICS, as according to the most reliable information we can gather, the GRAPHIC has a long lead at every postoffice,

We are also willing to go further, and ask each newsdealer in the city, and Armstrong at the Boston depot, to give a sworn statement of the number of GRAPHICS and Journals sould during April and May. We do not mean the number sent each newsdealer, for obvious reasons.

We will also publish the number of pounds sent out of the county through the Newton postoffice by each paper, but we must draw a line at the junk man, as we are not willing to include the number of Journals sold weekly to Mr. Dunn, in "paid circulation."

The truth of the matter is that the GRAPHIC has made such a steady and rapid gain during the past two years, that it now can claim the largest circula-tion, and what is more, it has figures in its possession to prove its statement. The Journal knows this, and therefore we are surprised at the foolishness of its claim to more than double the circulaof the GRAPHIC and the High chool Review.

We have known for some time that the Journal was trying to injure the advertising patronage of the Graphic by statements made to advertisers; but as it has now made a public claim, for our own protection we are called upon to state the truth of the matter. We be-lieve that there is abundant room in Newton for two papers, without either of them attempting to run down the oth-er, or to interfere with the other's busi-ness. As long as the Journal confined itself to private statements, whether true or not, there was no occasion to notice them, and there would have been none had it simply contented itself with doubling or trebling its actual circulation, in talking to advertisers, but when it attempts publicly to injure the Graphic, it must either prove its statement or submit the imputation of having attempted to advertisers policy of giving advertisers an exact statement of its circulation, believing that "Honesty is the best policy," and that a good reputation is better than any transient advantage that might be gained by representing its circulation as double or treble what it really is. This of course places it at some disadvantage by the side of papers who pursue the opposite policy, but there is a certain satisfaction in doing business on a solid foundation, and in being able to throw open our press-room to every caller, without fear of the result.

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC, ditizens and tax-payers to City Hall next Monday evening. It is one of the most important contracts in the gift of the City Council, and a three years' contract involves a good deal of money. Mr. H. H. Cutler, of the Electric Light Com-pany, has an illustrated article on anoth-Mr. H. er page, which gives a very clear idea of er page, which gives a very clear idea of what the company propose to do, if they secure the contract, and the kind of poles and lights they will set up. It will aid those who attend the hearing to understand one side of the question, as the interview with Mr. Joseph N. Bacon, while it is to wake the other ways are given to extend the other contracts. published two weeks ago, gave the other side. It is fortunate that the City Council has taken plenty of time to consider the matter, and they will be much better prepared to vote understandingly, after next Monday's hearing. Such an impor-tant matter ought not to be disposed of off-hand, at one or even two meetings.

> THE greatest good of the greatest number is what should be considered in national legislation, and for this reason the free lumber clause of the Mills bill is popular with the people. It is all very well to protect the lumber manufacturers and the farmers who grow timber, but they are a very small part of our population, while every man who builds a house is interested in the price of lumber, and in having it as cheap as possible. Every builder now complains of the extortionate price asked for lumber of every kind, and with the present pool arrangements it costs much more than it ought to build a house. With lumber on the free list the competition would be greater, and the people would get the benefit. It would also aid to prevent the present wholesale destruction of our forests, which will have such a baneful effect upon the climate, the rainfall, and the fruitfulmess of the soil. With free lumber and wise forestry laws, both the people and the country would be substantially benefitted.

THE names to be found in the list of incorporators of the Newton Coopera-tive Bank are a guarantee that it will be ably and honestly managed, and that it will be a successful business investment. GRAPPICS and Journals sent regularly through their respective offices. This would establish the truth of the matter, his home has a more personal interest in the city than one who simply rents a house, and anything that will aid to such an end will be welcomed by all who de-sire the best interests of Newton. There is no reason why the city should not Sworn statement of the number of Graphics and Journals sold during April and May. We do not mean the sites, and no more pleasant or healthful suburb of Boston can be found. It is confidently expected that the coopera-tive bank will be an important factor in the growth of the city.

THE St. Louis Convention has attracted public attention this week, but the Gresham movement seems to be still growing. The boom for Depew has had a set-back by the discovery that Mr. Depew was one of the Greeley bolters, and made many speeches severely criticizing the Republican party that year, he being the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of New York. As botting has been pronounced to be an unpardonable sin by the present would be managers of the Republican party, Mr. Depew is evidently out of the race. No such charge can be brought against Judge Gresham, as he has always been a loyal Republican and represents the best and most in-telligent portions of the party. He is al-so a believer in protection, and would reunite all factions of the party.

Mr. EDWARD L. LEMON, who has been the local reporter of the Newton Journal for the past year and a half, now occupies a similar position on the Graphic.
Mr. Lemon is conceded to be the best local reporter in Newton, and the Graphic has received many congratulations upor being able to secure him. He still re-tains his position as Newton reporter for the Boston Herald, for which paper he is doing excellent work, and there is now every prospect that the Graphic will be more of a necessity than ever to Newton people.

A matter of some interest to many cit-In addition to the offers made above, izens will be the announcement, that the we will leave the matter to any three in men, one to be chosen by each paper, and they two to choose a third, and give them every opportunity to examine our tenders of aldermen next Monday evening, after which it will be posted for tenders of the days in prominent places in all the wards. At the expiration of that time books, count the papers we print, stand wards. At the expiration of that time by and see them mailed, if the Journal it will be revised by the Common Councit, and all who wish to be excused from serving, should look out for the list and get their names erased.

THE Newton Centre Improvement As ociation is so much encouraged by their this year. The Centre has so many natural advantages, that it is the best place The Graphic has always followed the olicy of giving advertisers an exact tatement of its circulation, believing make it a city affair.

THE news of the failing health of Rev James Freeman Clarke has caused much sorrow in this city, which was his early home, and where he has a large number of warm personal friends.

"A Protest Against" Ignorance

o the editor of the GRAPHIC: A recent article in the GRAPHIC con tained a statement to the effect that Universalists believe that all men will saved, "whatever may be their spiritual conditions." I have no desire to engage in controversy, especially with a writer who conceals his name from the public; nor have anything to do with his illiberwho conceats in shade from the public; nor have anything to do with his illiberality. But may I venture to suggest, that a writer should be sparing in statements concerning beliefs, of which it is only too evident he knows nothing. There is not a Universalist minister in the denomination "who believes that allmen will be saved whatever their spiritual condition." On the contrary, Universalism teaches that salvation is the perfection of man's moral and spiritual virtue. This the writer might easily have ascertained by reference to Universalist literature.

Possibly his fear of theological contamination was greater than his sense of justice. I presume also that some one will do him the favor to correct his misrepresentation of orthodoxy. It is hoped that the writer's fine religious sensibilities, which will not allow him to sit for over an "hour and a half" under a "religious banner" other than his own, will be sufficient to restrain him from again committing the sin of careless misrepresentation.

The High School Review.

The May number of this excellent school magazine was issued this week and has more articles than usual on school topics, which makes it of special value to all interested in the High school. There are also a number of miscellaneous articles, among them one unusually sensible one on "What College Shall I Enter," in which the writer shows very plainly the advantages of Harvard over other colleges, and makes short work of the criticisms made in a previous number. From the "Siftings" we see that the "Newton Graphic" is the favorite reading of the class of '91, which shows what a very promising class '91 is. and has more articles than usual or

She has resided in West Newton for 29 years, and was a member of the Second Congregational church, and was beloved and esteemed by all who knew her. One son, Mr. J. Cheever Fuller, survives her. The funeral took place from her late residence, Thursday afternoon, at 2.30 p. m., and was attended by numerous friends and relatives. Rev. H. J. Patrick officiating. The floral tributes were very pretty and appropriate. The remains were interred in the Newton cemetery.

The commencement concert by the pu-pils of Lasell Seminary was given in the gymnasium of the seminary in Auburn-dale Thursday evening, and was attended by a fashionable audience. The chorus numbers by the Orphean club, the vocal selection by the Getherela quartet and a pianoforte rendition, Hebrieden and a pianoforte rendition, Hebrieden overture, eight bands, Misses Gay, Holden, Law and Oliver, were special features of the program. The accompaniments were rendered by Prof. Hill and J. Wallace Goodrich, pianists, Mr. Nowell, violinists. Miss Barbour sang "Slumber Song," violin obligate by Mr. Nowell. She possesses a remarkably pure voice, of even register, and her enuciation is very clear and distinct. The pianoforte quartet, Misses Holden, Chapin, Spellmeyer, and Prof. Hills, rendered the overture, "Merry Wives of Winsor" in an artistic manner, the accentuation being excellent. A selection, andante in F. Beethoven, pianoforte and violin, by Miss Thresher and Mr. Nowell, was a most enjoyable rendition. The final number, "Oh! Skylark for Thy Wing," was rendered by the chorus of the school, under the direction of Mr. J. W. Davis. It was ha admirable conclusion to an excellent program, the voices blending harmoniously. The fair pupils were the recipients of deserved encores during the evening and were warmly congratulated by numerous friends at the close of the concert. overture, eight hands, Misses Gav. Hold-

The Caminia Urso Concert.

The concert given at City Hall, Monday evening, by Mme. Camilla Urso, was attended by a representative Newton audience, that is to say, one which filled about half the seats. Mme. Urso showed herself to have lost none of the artistic merit for which she has always been famous. her playing throughout being famous, her playing throughout being nearly perfect, technically at least. The only criticism which could possibly be made, being in the shading, which at made, being in the shading, which at times was a little overdrawn, making it sound rather uneven. Miss Griffin made a very pleasant impression by her careful singing, her voice being displayed the best in an encore, the "Rock-a-bye-Baby" by Ethelbert Nevins, the lower tones of her voice being by far the best. Mr. Louis Miller gave a very unsatisfactory rendering of Meyer Helmund's "Margarita," but was heard to better advantage in his second selection. Mr. King's numbers might have pleased the concertgoers or a country town, but were of the order too often heard to be enjoyed by a Newton audience, while they were noticeable for their entire lack of expression. In fact, this criticism can well be applied to the whole program. Such selections are enjoyable in part of a program, but artists should remember that in cities near the Hub, where the finest music is constantly heard, that audiences expect something of a higher order than that heard in country towns. times was a little overdrawn, making it Improved Order of Red Men. Newton is again to become the hunt ing-ground of redmen. However, our readers need not feel alarmed. It is not a return of the savage aboriginal, but a peaceful occupation by the modern "Improved Order of Red Men," a civil-ized organization which replaces the blood-stained tomahawk with the calblood-stained tomahawk with the calumet of peace, and binds the white man with bonds of amity instead of thougs for torture and pain. From the descriptive circular it appears that the Order is meritorious in every way, and has special good qualities which are enabling it to outstrip all others in rapid growth, and increasing influence. It is commended to the patriotic sentiment of the community. for its purely American origin and spirit to the lover of beautiful ritualistic work, in its dramatic beauty and strength, which fire and enthuss the heart; and to good citizens generally for its exemplification of the benevolent and fraternal virtues.

There is room in this city for this good work, Past Sachem Howland and others meeting was held in G. A. R. Hall, Newtonville, Wednesday evening June 6, at 8 o'clock. The petition for charter, with

The Nock Trial.

The Mock Trial.

A mock trial under the auspices of the Newton High School Lyceum was given in the City Hall last Saturday evening. There was an excellent attendance of the parents and friends of the students, with a good sprinkling of the fairer sex, and the good points during the progress of the lawyers' wrangles and testimony of the lawyers' wrangles and testimony of witnesses were fully appreciated, frequent rounds of applause demonstrating the approval of those present. The occasion for the august legal talent before the bar of justice, may be summed up in a few words. A young man was accused of carrying an infernal machine into the school committee room, situated in the school committee room, situated in the high school building, with the fell purpose of blowing up the respectable body of gentlemn who meet to transact business in the interest of the education of the youth of our cultured community. The following gives the list of participants in the trial: Judge, William M. Jones, '86; prosecuting attorneys, J. F. Morton, '88, E. D. Pierce, '88; sprisoner's counsel. John Cuttler, '86, Harry Whitmore, '86; witnesses for prosecution, S. Burrage, '88, (acquaintance of prisoner, E. A. Greene, '91, (member of the school), E. Blake, (detective); witnesses for defence, W. B. Greene, '88, (principal of the school), Ernest Markham, '88 (member of the D. M. T. Club.) Edward L. Pickard, Jr., '88, (anarchist of D. M. T.); prisoner, Arthur M. Strong, '88; clerk and crier, A. H. Putney, '89; sheriff, B. B. Smith, '88. The prosecution endeavored to show that the prisoner was a membe, of an anarchist society, and that underneath his fine white vest and beautifully laundered shirt there lurked a black heart. The defence mairtained that the prisoner was an estimable voung man, born to be good and in capable of such a grievous sin. They endeavored to show that a box which he of gentlemen who meet to transact busi ness in the interest of the education of carried into the school committee room contained not an infernal machine but a pair of boots without a sole. The only powder about them was powdered dust, surely not dangerous or combustible. Notwithstanding the boots, the Jury penetrated beneath the surface of the leather and viewed the facts in their awful significance. They found the young man guilty and he was sentenced to secure a new school building for the students with suitable accommodations for calisthenics and military drill. The prisoner was overcome and would have fallen had not the policeman propped him up, until he partially recovered his shattered faculties.

The sixth annual prize drill of the Newton High School Battalion, will be held at the Eliot estate, West Newton June 16, at 2.30 p. m. The City Government and the School Board will be among the invited guests.

The first time I ever saw her face I thought it the face of an angel, and the face of an angel, altho age has wrinkled it and sorrow has deformed it, it has ever

It and sorrow has determed it, it has estimated in the since seemed to me.

A child, whose only home was the almshouse, what else should I think, when, fair, and sweet, and gracious, she floated into the room where I was doing some scullion's work, and lifted a heavy brown curl of mine in her softly gloved hand, and said, in a voice sweet as a flute. "You are coming home with me. Wa are going to live together." Do you suppose if an angel out of Heaven, with suppose if an angel out of Heaven, with great rosy plumes arching over his head, and tipped with Heaven's light, had said, "Come, my wings are strong; trust to them; let us see what there is above the stars," I should have felt differently?

And just out of that place of dismal dreariness, her home seemed a sort of heaven, its gardens, its lawns, its wide halls its righ rooms, these dark with soft.

halls, its rich rooms, these dark with soft halis, its rich rooms, these eark with soft glooms, these bright with sunshine and flowers, and everywhere the pervading presence of her own sweet spirit like the sunshine of the sky.

I was taken immediately into close companionship and personal attendance on herself; as I afterward learned because I was born of a race bad for generations, the last one of the race, and she had re-solved to bar the way to further wicked-ness by rearing me under different in-fluences, believing fully in the possibilities of such redemption. It is true that Rose and Matilda, her two daughters, a little older than myself, reseated my introduction into the family, and, in controduction into the family, and, in con-sequence, Mrs. Wilmington, who would not let me go about the servants, had me more in her own rooms than perhaps otherwise she would have done, my meals often served in her up-stairs sit-ting-room, where, indeed, she not seldom shared them with me, for her health was delicate, and she was not always able to go down herself. Here she taught me daintiness of table behavior, and niccties of fine sevine; and here I learned to read of fine sewing; and here I learned to read and acquired something like an education in daily studies, under her eye, till I could really help Aleck at his books, and in some things was quite equal to Rose and Matilda.

but even Rose and Matilda had grown beyond their mother's power of govern-ment, as the daughters of perfectly un-selfish mothers are apt to do; and they strenuously objected to my being placed on anything like a footing with them-selves.

Why, just think, Mamma, who she is I where she came from," cried Rose one day.

"I know that far too well," said the mother, gently. "It is a specter before me night and day, worse now that I have become fond of her than it was before, when I only sought to reclaim her. But I struggle with it, and I see that I shall oversepare.

might have had that face.

"Oh, no, no," I cried, before I thought, "don't speak to them so! They never meant anything—they didn't know—they"— "Don't undertake to excuse us to our mother, if you please," said Rose, chillingly. "If she prefers the happiness of a—of—of yourself, to ours, there is nothing more to be said," And then she swept from the room like a young tragedy queen and Matilda followed her. And all the stern command melted out of my kind mistress's face, and tears came instead, as she sank into a chair and cried as tho her poor heart would break, while I knelt beisde her, and threw my arms around her, and begged her to be quiet. "They love you, they love you," I said; it is only I that they don't care for. And I—' think I had better go away. In all these years you have taught me so much that I can very well take care of myself now. Here I only make discord. And indeed, indeed, your work is done; you have saved me. A life of wrong doing, if that was to have been my fate, would be impossible to me now. Crime would be impossible to me now. Crime would be impossible to me now. But my dear mistress would not listen to me; she begged me. with a nervous fright, not to forsake her, and showed her reliance on me so tenderly that my heart swelled with pride and gladness to think that at last she felt so well repaid in me for her long care.

So I still stayed with her, took from her what care I could, and felt daily as if I might never do enough to repay her gain saw Mrs. Wilmington assume an air of reproof or command; somehow the insolence and soullessness of these tried, too, to make them happy in their own way; she gave them twice their allowance in money, from her personal momen, showed her; well be tried, too, to make them happy in their own way; she gave them twice their allowance in money, from her perso

"I don't know what has been said," she exclaimed to her daughters; "something, crainly, of which you should be a shamed. "I had always been more tender of him," she began again, after a pause, "since he was so unhappy in his early years; for he wanted to marry a young gir! I had brought up, and who! I thought loved us all, and she went off one night in the dark, ran away and left us all, and she went off one night in the dark, ran away and left us all, and she went off one night in the dark, ran away and left us all, and she went off one night in the dark, ran away and left us all, and broke his heart!" I wondered why that gave my own a throb after all these years. "And almost broke mine," she went on, "for she was as much to me as a daughter, and I thought! I had saved her from a life of trouble—but—I never knew—I couldn't believe—the girls said she had gone all wrong. But! I felt—something in me said she wan to leave me? I never had any track of her. I was so indignant at first—and then it was too late. But so often since in the night! I have cried to know what had become of her! I wonder so about her now sometimes. I could bear things better, I think, if I only knew that she had never come to harm. I should feel, too, that I had done something in the world. For you see my own three children—you see what I have done with them!"

"But I thought Aleck was all right," I said.

"Read it!" she exclaimed, with a flick-

"But I them!"
"But I thought Aleck was all right," I said.
"Read it!" she exclaimed, with a flicker and sparkle of anger. And she picked up the telegram which had fallen in her lap and held it open before me. It ran, after the date and address:
"Stay with Rose. Impossible for Helen to take the care."
It was the same Aleck as of old, plainly enough. The idea that I could ever have thought I loved him! while I read those words, the little old woman was sobbing again till she shook, and it seemed to me that her sobs were louder than the clangor of the wheels or the puffs of the engine. "They are my own itesh and blood," she sobbed." "I was always good to them—too good; and now they cast me off. There isn't any place for me but the grave. Not one of them wants me. They have possessed themselves of all I had, and I am become a burden. And I am reduced—to—talking to a stranger—about my own children! But you don't know how hard it is—you children that you rocked upon your breast when they were babies—whose little feet you covered once with kisses"—
What a lonesome, desolate country it was through which we were passing.

"It is despair," she groaned.
"No one in God's good world must despair," said I. "There is always one friend left. Lay your head on my should rehere. If you should smell these saits? Don't think of such a thing as despair! I will try and see you safely through. I have nothing else to do but to help the unfortunate. I was very unfortunate once myself."

"You never were sent to the poorhouse!" she cried, with a sudden, sharp agony of tone.

"I was born in a poor-house," I said.
"To think of it, to think of it. I have failed to poor-house myself!"

"Perhaps not." I said. "Tell me all about it now. Possibly it can be hindered. There are "—

"Oh, it isn't the poor-house! It isn't the poor-house itself!" she exclaimed, her little wan face flushing faverishly.

"Who?"

"My children. Oh, my children!"

"You hold it not seem so? Would any one believe— Oh, I tried to be a good mother! I loved them"—

"You children? I mossible."

"Would it not seem so? Would any one believe— Oh, I tried to be a good mother! I loved them"—

"You not hidren? I must speak to some one I used to love. Tell me. And nothing to me. And my own children when the some one I used to love. Tell me. Are your children used." I must speak to some one I used to love. Tell me. Are your children unkind?"

"No," said she. "Never, in so many words. They never struck me, you know be dealt with the hand on flesh! When my sons-in-law, managed my place for me. WHAT WE OWE TO OUR COUNTRY.

A Memorial Tribute by Rev. Dr. Wolcott Calkins.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES IN ELIOT HALL, ATTENDED BY CHARLES WARD POST.

The services at Eliot Hall, Newton, hast Sunday evening, were of an impressive character, the exercises being especially arranged in memoriam of the brave men who answered the call to arms in the hour of the inition's peril the auditorium was completely filled and the gallery seats were also occupied. By invitation, the members of Charles Ward post were present and occupied front seats in the main body of the hall, nearly one hundred of the veterans being present. At the rear of the choir, the silk flags of the post were displayed side by side, the bright new stand of colors recently presented by the Woman's Relief Corps being in marked contrast to the older and much worn flag which has been borne to the breezes on many a Memorial day. Around the pulpit, the nation's flag, the grand old stars and stripes, was gracefully festooned, a simple yet significant decoration.

The services opened with singing by the choir under the direction of Mr. J. P. Cobb, the selection Jubilati, by Holden, being finely rendered. After prayer had been offered, the choir sang the beautiful hymn, "To thee, O, Country." The services opened with singing by the choir under the direction of Mr. J. P. Cobb, the selection from Isaiah, 26th chapter, 15th verse: "Thou hast increased the nation; thou art glorified thou hadst removed it far into all the neds of the earth." What we owe to our country, add the speaker, is a new question that has been thrust upon us during the past twenty years. When the war of the rebellion was over and temed to our condition of the catch." What we ove to our country, said the speaker, is a new for the veterans, and we reliated the past twenty years. When the war of the rebellion was over and temed to our country was thought America would perish under a discussion of the servent benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Calkins.

during the past twenty years. When the war of the rebellion was over and the men who had defended the country returned home flushed with victory, it was thought America would perish under a rule of despotism, but the men whom it was feared were to become dangerous,returned to occupations of peace, forgetting the bloody contests in the increased resources of this great nation. What do we owe to our country and what is the country worth? Its money value has doubled and trebled during the past 20 years. Its wealth is so vast that we could buy up the treasures of Europe and scarcely feel it. The whole of Rus-sia could be purchased, with its railroads, its navy and vast military material. Great Britain, once the richest country on earth, we could to-day buy up and still have a remaining balance. Our resources are scarcely yet discovered. our country is a continent that stretches from sea to sea, across the zones in which the world's work is done, with three millions of acres of land, one-half of which is the best fruit and graingrowing soil in all the world. Our country is the farm, the garden, the orchard of all the world. It is also the mine and workshop of the world. Our materials lie at hand, and we possess an enthusiasm for labor unequalled elsewhere. While protecting industries, we place our manufactures abroad. Our watches find their way to Paris and Geneva, and our machinery is found in all parts of Eu-rope. We have even distanced Great Britain in the value of our manufactured what is our country? These figures of prosperity which I have given are mere ciphers unless there is something in front of them which gives them a moral value. There is something and that is the American citizen. God kept his time lock upon us until we had power and influence enough to secure liberty with the firmness of strongigovernment. The Pilgrim fathers and their descend-and influence enough to secure liberty with the firmness of strongigovernment. The Pilgrim fathers and their descendants could be counted upon the fingers in comparison with the great merease in population, but their words and principles have been handed down and form the American character of to-day.

I am not forgetting the increase of Mormonism or the vast hordes which come to our shores from the workhouses and penal institutions of Europe. I do not forget that seven million men have been released from bondage in ignorance and that population is crowding into great cities, and that the same great cities through evil influences are being misgoverned. I have considered all these things, and after all we are a people numbering sixty millions, without slave, or serf, or down-trodden among us. We have never had a man who was so dangerous a character as to be banished from the republic. We have never been a warlike race, for no American citizen ever left his chosen calling for seenes of bloodshed. We have never had a debate upon our form of government. When I was in France, I never listened to a patriotic address without hearing the question raised, "Shall the republic be perpetuated?" We have never when the more stomarch over here, and if we stumbled across one, would be in ignorance of its nature. I was asked in France what we debated about in this country, and I replied, "O, we have rerible debates—we talk about civil service reform, the tariff and free trade." They were reaching toward the millenium. All these things tend to show the moral power of American character, and highest of the day statement of the day.

THE MASS. TEMPERANCE HOME.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF ITS WORK, METHODS AND RESULTS.

Among the many charitable institu-tions in our commonwealth, are some whose work is carried on so quietly and free from ostentation that their existence is hardly known save to a comparatively few persons.

During the past four years the Massa chusetts Temperance Home has received and cared for over five handred men who were addicted to drink, and as a result scores upon scores of these same men are to-day occupying responsible positions in business, and giving comfort to their families, and satisfaction to their employ-ers. The founders of this home contend that fining and imprisoning does not re form. That many can be reclaimed has been proved beyond a doubt. The home is situated at 27 New Ocean

The home is situated at 27 New Ocean street, Lynn, and its patients comes from all parts of our state. They are poor men, many of them without friends, destitute of hope, and broken down both physically and mentally. On entering, the patient is first restored to his normal condition; if medicine is required it is administered, (but no alcoholic liquor is used in treatment, or even allowed on the premises). As he gains in bodily strength his reasoning powers are appealed to, and he is made to feel that he may redeem himself. Every effort is made to encourage the patient, and return him to good citizenship. On leaving the Home he is aided in obtaining employment, and assisted in other ways as his needs require, thus assuring him that he has friends who are interested in his welfare.

that he has friends who are interested in his welfare.

Two hundred and fourteen men have received its benefits during the pastyear, and its work is steadily increasing. It has no endowment or fund of any kind to fall back on, but is supported solely by contributions, from people who believe in practical temperance methods, and who watch with unflagging interest its work and growth among the many worthy.

out thinking that we don't half appreciate our country. The foreigner who comes here and half behaves himself for eighteen months becomes an enthusiastic American. The liberty loving spirit pervades the land.

In conclusion, the speaker spoke of what good citizens owe to their country, counselling a stalwart defence against the insidious enemies intemperance, so —The new Methodist parsonage was completely filled on Saturday evening on the occasion of the house-warming. Among those present were Hon. Alden Speare and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Turner, Dr. and Mrs. Batter, Dr. and Mrs. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Drake, and nearly the entire society. Hon. Alden Speare made the welcoming speech to

Rev. Mr. Clark, the pastor, on behalf of the trustees. The society have taken a great deal of pains to make the place charming, papering and painting anew and opening new windows to admit the sunlight. The furniture provided is very handsome and shows much good taste in the buyers, whoever they may be. This buying and fitting up a parsonage by the youngest society in the village, shows much good taste in the buyers society in the village, shows much enterprise and will certainly be a source of gratification and happiness to the beloved pastor of it.

—On Sunday evening a large audience gathered in the Methodist church to listen to an address by Mrs. Dr. Butler, the returned missionary. The services were opened by Scripture reading, and a prayer by Rev. Mr. Clark, the pastor of the church. This was followed by a gloria sung by Mrs. Lewis R. Her address, though an hour and a half long, held the attention of the congregation throughout. She spoke first of her impressions of Mexico, its beautiful climate, plants and scenery, and after describing a wonderful journey which she and her husband took from Vera Cruz up to the high land on which the City of Mexico stands, she passed on to speak of the religion of Mexico. One could hardly realize that such fearful idolatry and cruelty could exist in our country as that which she described to her andience. Maximilian and Carlotta of Mexico found the Roman Catholic church there, prohibiting the Bible and punishing all heretics, so called, in the Inquisition. Mrs. Butler had with her a picture or photograph, of four bodies taken out of as many cells in the Inquisition, where they had been walled up, leaving a small aperture through which air could reach them, and left to die of starvation. She herself had looked into these cells and realized the horror of it. She also had iron lashes with which the Catholic penitents lashed themselves, and iron spiked belts and bracelets worn next the skin voluntarily by these ignorant people, thinking it would atone for their sins. This, Mrs. Butler said, was what the missionaries had to struggle with, ignorance and vice. Dr. Butler founded the first mission there in Puebla, and it had been very successful, schools, churches and an orphanage having been built. Christian Endeavor Meeting.

A union meeting of the Young People s Christion Endeavor Societies of Newton was held in the Methodist Church, Newtonville, on Monday evening. Pleasant social features occupied the first half hour, after which the meet-ing was called to order by Pres. E. B. Hitchcock, and the following musical and literary program was rendered:

Cornet solo, by Arthur Plummer of Auburudale; singing by Mrs. Niles and Miss Emerson of Newton; recitations by Mrs. Roe of the New England Conserva tory, Boston; violin solo, by Mr. Cutler of Newton. Mrs. Roe's rendering of the "Street Concert" was especially enjoyaable, showing how the sweet innocence of childhood is often a factor in opening the heart and eyes of the oppressed to the sweet promises of Christ. It was very pathetically given. The accompanists of the evening were Messrs. Allison and Estey.

There was so large an attendance that the vestry was found inadequate, and at the conclusion of the musical numbers the meeting adjourned to the church auditorium. The secretary then proceeded with the reading of the records, and a letter was read from Mr. F. E. Clark. Mr. Agr y, president of the Eliot Society, had paid the sum of $35 to the society, $20 of which purchased a life membership. Upon motion of Mr. Agry, the name of George H. Coffin of Newton Centre was proposed to be placed on the Life Membership Rolls, in recognition of Centre was proposed to be placed on the Life Membership Rolls, in recognition of the faithful services rendered by him in the cause of their great society. This motion was seconded and Mr. Coffin was elected. Rev. Fayette Nichols of Newton then offered prayer, followed by reading of Scripture by Dr. Hitchcock, after which the Rev. Pleasant Hunter of Newtonville delivered a most instructive address to the young people upon the work that is before them, setting forth the ways and means to be employed by them in order to raise this society to the grandeur that they so ear mestly desired. The future of this great movement depends upon the work done by them today, and as they hoped it to be in the future, so must they live and work in the present. His earnest words received the close attention of all to the end. The Rev. G. S. Butters, pastor of the church, then proceeded to explain the questions found in the question box. Among the questions that were taken out of the box were the following, which were answered by Mr. Butters.

Question—Which is the most important position, a superintendent of a Sinday School or a president of a Christian Endeavor Society?

Answer—The superintendent, as his duttes are next to the pastor's.

day School or a president of a Christiun Endeavor Society?

Answer—The superintendent, as his duties are next to the pastor's.

Question—Should ladies lead meetings?

Answer—From a Methodist standpoint I should say emphatically, yes.

Question—If a member of a society is absent from three consecutive consecration meetings, should his or her name be dropped from the membership roll?

Answer—In most cases the name should be dropped; it would depend somewhat upon circumstances.

Question—Can one be a Christian any length of time and not be aware of it?

Answer—No, the individual will know it and the change in his life will soon be apparent to others.

Question—What is the best method of dealing with infidels?

Auswer—As a rule, do not argue with them, but show them by your own life what religion is.

The exercises closed with a consecration meeting which was led by Rev. Mr. Whitman of Newton Upper Falls. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Strong. It was a very successful union meeting, ten Newton societies being represented. There was also a delegation present from the Waverley society.

Their plans are not yet completed, but are so far underway that it is probable they will be able to offer superior advantages. Thoroughly competent teachers are to be employed, and lectures in special branches will aid in the instruction. The scope of the school will render it unnecessary to send a girl away from Newton to gain a thorough education. Especial attention is to be pand to the health of pupils, so that mental training and bodily soundness may go side by side. Further particulars of the plans will be made known shortly in advertisements and circulars. A school of this character has long been needed in this end of the city, and it will probably be well patronized by our own citizens and receive a good share of boarding pupils from other places. #### THE SECOND HEARING.

THE NEWTON ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. PRE-SENT THEIR CASE.

There was a fair attendance at the adjourned hearing on the Electric order, Thursday evening. Both branches of the city council held short sessions previous to the hearing, at which routine business was transacted.

The hearing opened at 8 p. m., His Honor, Mayor Kimball in the chair. Hon. Chas. Robinson appeared as a citizen who signed the petition for a hearing, because he was asked to do so the ground that the proposed lights would be dangerous, and also represented the Newton Electric Light and Power company. He said that he wanted electric lights in his house and he did not fear the alternating system or think he would ever get in between two currents. He first called on Mr. H. H. Cutler, the electrician of the company, who gave teselectrician of the company, who gave tes-timony as to the capacity, efficiency and safety of their company and their sys-tem. He said the attorney of the gas company favored the Edison system, becarse that system could not light the houses. The Boston Transcript article, was simply a quack medicine article, with the moral use only the Edison syswith the moral, use only the Edison sys-tem. He referred to his article in the Graphic of June Sth, as showing the harmless nature of the alternating currents, when properly insulated, and called Weiles E. Holmes and G. W. Sprout, who had both taken a shock of Sprout, who had both taken a shock of 1,000 volts, to testify to its harmlessness. Both witnesses and Mr. Cutler were sharply cross questioned by Mr. Powers and Mr. Paine of the Edison company, the latter doubting whether they had got into a complete circuit. Mr. Cutler did not think a man would stay in a circuit long enough to kill him, although he might get badly burned. Mr. Powers asked if the best scientists did not say that anything over 400 volts was dangerous. Mr. Cutler agreed that they did but he doubted it. The price given to the city was made by him and was the lowest price at which the company could not afford to go into the business of lighting houses without a contract from the city. The Edison system would take four plants to light the city, according to its own experts. Mr. Powers asked if the Edison company did not have two systems, one for house and one for street lighting.

Mr. A. L. Robrer, the principal electrician of Thomson-Houston system was next called on and was subjected to a very sharp fire of questions from Mr. Powers and the Edison agents, most of which was so technical that it was difficult to tell how successfully he passed the ordeal. He did not consider the alternating system dangerous, as people could not come in contact with the main wares and only 50 volt circuits went in houses. The converters used by his company could not be burned out, as they had lightning arrestors. The dangerou had inchemen was small if the insulation was good. Many persons considered the alternating currents not as dan gerous as the direct. He did not know how many incandscent lamps his company had. The Thomson-Houston lamps had been used for 18 months. In Chicago the Inspector had some peculiar ideas which accounted for the regulation there. The alternating currents were not feared as much as they were, before they were so well known.

not feared as much as they were, before they were so well known.

Prof. Silas W. Holman of Auburndale, assistant professor of physics at the Institute of Technology appeared as a citizen. He had had his house lighted by electricity, having personally seen that the usulation was perfect. He considered electricity better than gas for sanitary reasons. Would not be afraid to take a shock of 1,000 volts, if something of great importance was at stake. Did not know what voltage was dangerous, as the fact was not established. Would give no weight to the Chicago regulation or to Siemen's testimony, as the latter was a very conservative electrician and ods.

Mayor Kimball asked Mr. Rohrer if he would be willing to take a shock of 1,000 volts, to prove to the Council teat it was not dangerous. Mr. Rohrer declined amid some laughter.

Mr Robinson said the deaths from electric lights were less than from any other illuminant, even gas was more deadly. Edward F. Porter, selectman of Watertown, testified in regard to the incandescent lights over which he was very enthusiastic. He feared no danger, and his town was waiting for Newton before it made a contract far another year.

J. H. Vail, superintendent of the Edison system of New York city and Mr. Paine testified that over a million and a quarter of Edison lamps were used, while only about 400,000 of the Thomson Houston lamps were in use, about 500 of which were in Boston; also to fatal accidents in Trenton and New Orleans from

In Ward Seven, for instance, he had seen work being done, which he knew nothing about, and much of the work was not necessary, and other work that was more needed was not touched. Other members also felt that the representative of the ward on the committee ought to be consulted as to the work, so that at least he could know what was going on. As for the orders in question, no doubt they were all right, but he objected to the principle of the chairman doing all the work of the committee. What are the councilmen on the committee for? If they were of no use they might as well resign. He wanted the money to be expended in his ward, spent where it was most needed, and not to satisfy some-body's whim or to cater to public opinion. He could tell the chairman where the $2,000 to be spent in Ward Seven ought to go. If other members of the committee felt the same way, he should like to stand alone.

Councilman Read said that he endorsed all that Mr. Hamblen had said, and he hoped that the matter would be corrected in the future.

DEATH OF ALBERT H. UPTON.1

VICES.

Mr. Albert F. Upton died quite sud-denly at his residence, Walker street, Newtonville, last Friday afternoon. The deceased has not been in good health during the past year, and within a few months returned from a trip in the South where he had been for his health. During the forenoon of Friday he appeared more than usually bright and cheery and strolled about the grounds of his estate. At about 1 o'clock, he had an ill turn, and soon lost consciousness, passing away at 4.20 p. m. Death resulted from paralysis of the brain brought on by Bright's disease.

Mr. Upton was born in Peabody, Mas sachusetts, and was 45 years of age. He has resided in Newtonville for ten years, a coal inspector was then taken up again and passed.

An order was passed apprepriating $500 for the construction of a drain on Bennington street, Ward 1, to relieve the street of the nuisance complained of by Mr. Ware.

An order appropriating $50 for water for the fountain in front of the Methodist church, Newtonville, caused some discussion, and was finally referred to the Park committee.

E. Fewkes and Son of Newton Highlands, were granted a license to build an addition to their greenhouses, and Mrs.

Johnson was granted a license for an intric Street Railway Company. During the civil war he served as 1st lieutenant and quartermaster in the 35th Massachusetts infantry. During his residence in Newton he has taken an active interest in the affairs of the city, and represented his ward in the common council in 1884 and 1885. He was the representative of the city government, in the water board in 1885, and served on the committees of state aid and military affairs, fire department and highway during his connection with the city council. He was a member of the Loyal Levion and formerly a member of Post 15, of Boston. His name was proposed and he was accepted to membership in Post 62 of this city, but by a singular coincidence, he was called away and was never mustered in. Those who are familiar with Mr. Upton's services as a city official, recognize his untiring devotion and conscientious discharge of the duties confided to his care. Personally, he was a man possessing estimable characteristics, a true friend, a loving father and husband, he was in every sense a large hearted and honorable gentieman. In pointics he was an ardent Republican, full of enthusiasm for the party which he believed to be the truest exponent of American principles. His views on political subject were unhesitatingly given, and his position in national, state and municipal affairs was never characterized by any shifting, unhesitating policy. Every man knew exactly where he stood, and those who differed from him respected him for his sincerity.

Only four years ago his wife died and but two'daughters survive of a once happy family. The mother and a brother of the deceased are also living.

The funeral took place from the late residence, Monday afternoon. There was a very large attendance of relatives, friends and former business associates, including a delegation from the Loyal Legion, the Newton city government and the Jarvis Engineering Company. The floral tributes were very beautiful, including a tablet from the city government, inscribed "City of Newton"; a wreath from the members of the common council of 1884 and 1885; a beautiful design, "The Gates Ajar," surmounted by a white dove and inscribed "our treasurer," from the members of the common council of 1884 and 1885; a beautiful design, "The Gates Ajar," surmounted by a white dove and inscribed "our treasurer," from the members of the common council of 1884 and 1885; a beautiful designs, "The Gates Ajar," from the common council of 1884 and 1885; a beauti

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

THE HEARING ON THE QUESTION OF LIGHTING THE STREETS.

There was a large attendance at the hearing on the proposed contract for lighting the streets by electricity, at City Hall, Monday evening. The hear-ing began at 8 o'clock, both branches of the City Council meeting in joint con-J. B. Goodrich opened with a strong plea for the Gas company, and he was followed by ex-Alderman S. L. Powers, who appeared for those petitioners who desire to have the city buy its own plant and do its own electric lighting. He and to its own electric lighting. It had a number of expert electricians pres-ent, and their testimony was largely technical. When Mr. Powers rested his case. Hon. Chas. Robinson arose to precase, Hon. Chas. Robinson arose to pre-sent the arguments of the Newton Elec-tric Light and Power company, but as the hour was late, and the audience was more than full of undigested facts, the hearing was adjourned to Thursday eve-

THE HEARING IN DETAIL.

Mayor Kimball called the joint conven-tion to order, and read the petition asking for a hearing.

Attorney J. B. Goodrich was the first to respond, and said that although the Newton and Watertown Gas Company had nothing to do with the petition, it seemed only proper that some statement of the exact position of that company should be given, as no information had been given concerning it in any of the been given concerning it in any of the debates or in the papers.

The amount the company receive from the city for lighting the streets makes a substantial addition to their income.

Last year they received $13,000 for the gas lamps and $5,000 for their oil lamps, but on the latter there was no profit as everyone knew, and the Gas Company d only taken the contract for them to oblige the city. Two years and a ago, when the question of arc lighting first came up, the Gas Company was ready to produce that light, and applied to the legislature for leave to furnish it. The statutes did not allow the gas companies to furnish electric light, but the Newton company was among the first to apply for such permission. They were strongly opposed by certain parties, but finally a general bill was reported; it was delayed, however, to the end of the session, and in the general scramble for adjournment, the bill was killed. The Newton company applied at the next legisla-ture, and they were opposed by coun-sel and by articles in the paper, but final-ly a general law was passed. The Gas ly a general law was passed. The Gas Company immediately called a meeting, at which two thirds of the stock was represented and voted to engage in the represented and voted to engage in the electric lighting business. The Gas Company was always *eady to do the work if the public desired it, and the gas commissioners said that as a measure of economy gas and electric light can be furnished cheaper by one company, be furnished cheaper by one company, but when there is an Electric light company already in the business, it is better to wait and see if a union of the two companies is not possible; however, if the existence of the Gas company is threatened, they would grant the permission for it to engage in electric lighting. The Newton company did not apprehend that any active measures would be taken by the city council to give the entire lighting of the streets to the Electric lighting of the streets to the Electric lighting of the streets to the Electric light company, and so they had not put in a bid to furnish electric lights, but if the city had decided that it must have electric lights in the streets, the Gas company is ready to compete for the contract. The purpose of the Electric light company by getting this contract is, to have all the streets wired, and so be ready to engage in house lighting, and if this is done, so much custom will be taken from the Gas company that they can make no reduction in the price of gas. He had no doubt but that the council only desired what was best for the city. The Gas company had some important advantages to offer in the way of increased light, and they were also ready to bid for electric lights, which they would probably be able to furnish for a less price. They had already offered an increased light at a less price than last year, and was also willing to take the gas section of the city and allow the Electric light company to furnish lights for the other section. He had some statements about the great damage so many poles and wires would be to many streets of the city, but he would not make them now. All the Gas company siy sthatthey would be glad to treat with the city, and there would be no difficulty in getting permission for the Gas company to furnish electric lights, if the city council desired to have competition. but when there is an Electric light com-this is done, so much custom will be taken from the Gas company that they can make no reduction in the price of gs. He had no doubt but that the council only desired what was best for the city. THE CITY TO DO THE WORK.

Ex-Alderman Powers said that he appeared for certain of the petitioners, to state their views. He understood that the hearing was a reflection upon their indemed in the council, and no city had such a trustworthy body of men to represent it. The citzens did not often ask for a hearing, but he recalled the Park matter, when a hearing was asked for and such strong arguments presented, that the project was killed. The order and one when the city and gave an exclusive contract to one company. The gentlemen in the Electric Light company, but in the contention between the two companies; the council had to act judicially, and choose what was best for the interest of the city. He thought the time had come when the city should put in and operatory in the contention between the two companies; the council had to act judicially, and choose what was best for the interest of the city. He thought the time had come when the city should put in and operatory in the contention between the two companies; the council had to act judicially, and choose what was best for the interest of the city. He thought the time had come when the city should put in and operat in a plant and furnish light for $27,09 a year, at the end of 50 years there would be an immense saving. So long as two companies compete for the work there would be competition and the city would get the benefit, but sooner or later one company would buy up the other, and then the city would be at the mercy of the one company would buy up the other, and then the city would be at the mercy of the one company. By making such a contract as the one proposed, the company would have its wires and poles on every street, and if it sold out there would be great trouble over its vested rights and the removal of the poles and wires. To make a three years contract now, when improvements were all the while taking place in the methods of electric lighting, is hardly a wise thing to do, before the three years were out there might come a great reduction in the cost. This system of electric lighting; syet in its infancy. It is also a serious question as to which plant is the best; there are claims of infringement on patents, and if the city makes a contract with a company which loses its case, it would be left in a bad its. The best thing to do would be to lay the proposed order on the table, choose a special committee of two aldermen and three councilmen, and have them consider the project of the city's buying its own plant, and what system it would be for the interests of the city to adopt, and whether to use many or few lights. Progressive cities were doing this, and 'Newton ought not to be behind the times. The ineandescent lights had only been used for two years, and new inventions and improvements were being made, which rendered it important that Newton should get the best. There was no need of haste, as he assumed that both the Gas company and the Electric Light company were willing to continue the present contract for the present. Electric light could be furnished by the city the same as water, which was at first furnished by private companies, but how every city owns its own water system. He had secured the attendance of the Edison Electric Light company, 16 Broad street, New York city, was called on, and said that he had charge of the street lighting work done by that company throughout the country. He had been five years with the company, and regarded the prospects of electric light companies as very encouraging. The electric light was especially well suited to street lighting, on account of the long hours and steady light. Lockport and Denver did their own lighting in a very satisfactory manner. Rochester had put in 150 lights last fall, and found it very satisfactory. A city could operate a plant quite as economically as a private company, and save the profit the company expected to make. The cost of a plant that would furnish the number of lights called for by this order would be between $80,000 and $100,000, this cost covering the best material, a brick fire proof station, brick stack and 1 extra machine. It would cost from $10 to $12 to operate the incandescent lights and $80 to $100 for the full are lights, amounting to some $17,000, thus saving on the proposed contract $10,000 a year. This would allow for repairs, and at the end of ten years the plant would be in as good condition as when started.

ALTERNATING CURRENTS

ALTERNATING CURRENTS

were not safe, Mr. Jencas said, and Mr. Edison had refused to use them, after many experiments. It was impossible to insulate the currents so as to control them. The converters would give way, the coverings were affected by heat or moisture, there would be crosses between the wires, which made them very dangerous to handle. The alternating currents were only used because they saved the companies some expense in copper wire. These alternating currents were what was used by the Newton company's incandescent system, and they were especially dangerous in house lighting. In Germany, steps had been taken to forbid the use of these alternating currents on account of the danger to lite and property.

Mr. Jencks was asked if he had seen the article in the Newton Graphic, illustrating the system the Newton company proposed to use. He replied that he had. The Pittsburg painter described might have saved himself by catching hold of an alternating wire, because his feet did not touch the ground, and so no circuit was established. If he had caught hold of both wires, or had touched different.

Mr. Henry F. Ross created some amuse.

If the city is to make such a radical change in the method of lighting its streets, and there seems to be no question of this, he thought the city could purchase its own plant, and thereby get the most reliable agad safest system, and also sive enough to pay for it in ten years. It would save at least one tenth of the cost of the plant every year, and at the end of ten years the city would own the plant free from debt, if the Newton Electric Light company can put tile business. The alternating system was not in use two years ago, and the Edison company was in litigation with the other companies, for infringements, and had gained decisions in Germany and England. He was subjected to quite a searching examination, mainly on teeh nical points.

LETTER FROM HENRY E. COBB.

LETTER FROM HENRY E. COBB.

Mr. Powers then submitted the following letter from Mr. Henry E. Cobb:
SARATOGA SPIRNOS.N. Y. June 9, '88.
To the Honorable, the City Government of Newton.

Gentlemen:—I very much regret that absence from the city deprives me of the privilege accorded me, as one of the petitioners, of being heard before your honorable body, in the matter of city lighting. I wish, however, to call your attention to some considerations which I think should receive your attention before you come to a final decision in the matter. There is no doubt that the city should have a complete and safe system of electric lighting, which could be adopted by citizens for lighting their dwellings and places of business, as well as their halls and churches. That system does not now exist, and under the present management, I think it will be shown to you cannot exist. If you shall give to the present Electric Light Co, the contract which is proposed, you perpetuate a dangerous and unreliable company, and prevent your citizens from employing electric lighting for general use except at the risk of life and property, which I do not believe you will care to take the responsibility of doing. I wish to distinctly state that I have no interest whatever in any form of electric lighting, and no stock or other interest in the Newton Gas Light Co., but only wish: $a$ a citizen and most reliable form of electric lighting furnished our city. I believe that if you can continue the present, and withhold from the Elect is Light Co. the profitable job which they now ask for, that some way can be devised which shall give the city what it needs. As a citizen and tax payer, I beg you will give this matter careful and impartial consideration, and look well to the interest of the citizens as well as the finances of the city in this particular department of street lighting. In other words, do not let a seeming advantage in lighting our streets lead you to action which shall give the city

Henry E. Com.

Mr. Powers rested his case by calling attention to the editorial in the Boston Transcript of Monday, in regard to the danger of alternating currents. He said that he hoped the hearing would be continued, in order to give the Newton company a chance to present their side of the case, as the opposition had taken up all the time.

Hon. Chas. Robinson said he was willing to go on if the council desired, but the time.

Hon, Chas, Robinson said he was willing to go on if the council desired, but the hour was late, the room warm, and he thought most of those present were tired. He might not be so tough as the members of the council, but he would prefer to have the hearing adjourned to another evening.

Alderman Childs moved to adjourn the hearing to Monday evening, June 25th, but Councilman Fenno objected to putting it off so long.

Councilman Borr amended to adjourn to Thursday evening, June 14th, and the motion as amended was passed. The report of the adjourned hearing will be found on another page.

THE CIRCULATION QUESTION.

In order to settle the question of the comparative circulation of the two Newton papers, the GRAPAIC has made several offers, which are conceded by disineral offers, which are conceded by disin-terested parties to be perfectly fair. So far we have received no acceptance of the proposition to leave the question to the several postmasters of Newton, or to the Newton newsdealers, or to three disinterested parties. The Graphthree disinterested parties. The GRAPH-IC printing office is always open to par-ties who wish to investigate, whether the other office is or is not, as the GRAPHIC only seeks to establish the truth. It is a question of importance mainly to advertisers, and from facts in our possession which we will publish if our possession which we will publish it called for, we are confident that the GRAPHIC has a larger paid circulation than any other Newton paper. We do not not claim "double the circulation of all other Newton papers," although if new subscribers come in at the rate they have done for the past six months, we shall doubtless be able to make that below with some intended by the part six parties by the send of an claim with some justice by the end of an-

FATAL ELECTRIC CURRENTS.

The most important question before our city council, in connection with electric light contract, is in regard to the danger from the "alternating current." If the things said of its extremely fatal qualities are true, the city council should not allow its use in the city, no matter how cheap may be the lights produced by it, or what the saving might be to the city.

The statements made by the Edison electricians may not be altogether impartial, but the question should be settled before any further progress is made. The Boston Transcript copied and commented upon an article in the New York Evening Post, by an electric engineer of high standing, and in this article he high standing, and in this article he says:

"I do not know of a single disinterested electrician of high standing who does not condemn the alternating system. Siemens & Halske, a firm of electricians with a world-wide reputation, have spent year of experiment upon it, but have abandoned it as unsaie, and say that its use should be prohibited by law. Following the example of Chicago, the Board of Electrical Control should forbid the use of the fatal alternating current, and legislatures, city councils and life insurance managers should see to it that stringent laws and regulations be passed to prevent this wholesale risk of human life. The placing the wires of the alternating system under ground would only intensify the danger in houses where it might be used, while its use with underwriter's wire in a city is as dangerous as a burning candle in a powder factory."

should get at the facts before taking any definite action. The letter from Mr. Henry E. Cobb contains substantially the same charge, and that there was danger was frankly admitted by the Fort Wayne engineer at Monday night's hearing. He attempted to make light of it, however, and said that it was used because of the extra cost of heavy copper wire required by the direct system. It is chearer and so the companies are will. satisfactory to the people, and the Trass-cause of the extra cost of heavy copper wire required by the direct system. It is cheaper and so the companies are will-ing to run the risk. They may be, but the citizens of Newton may have a different opinion, and we do not imagine that the Fort Wayne system would se-ture a single vot heavy.

that the Fort Wayne system of the city council are to do Evidently, if the city council are to do anything with electric lights, they must make beforehand stringent rules and regular make beforehand stringent rules and regular make the form and take measures to enforce the form of private company in this matter, no mat-ter who the stockholders may be. If we can have a safe system of electric lighting probably no one would object, but until the fact is established that any proposed system is safe, the council may well hesitate.

As for the proposed plan of having the city do its own lighting, if there were to be no improvements in the near future, and the copper syndicate were to be able to force up the price of copper wire indef-initely, it might be a good thing to go into it; but most of the arguments ex-Alderman Powers used against a three years' contract with the Newton compears contract with the Newton com-pany, apply with equal force against the city's establishing any plant for the pres-ent. The gas lamps are absolutely safe, and so are the oil lamps, and rather than run any risk of fatal accidents, the majority of the citizens would prefer to re-

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC, was almost impossible to get at the truth at least by the unscientific listener. It was asserted that 1,000 volts was not necessarily fatal, and several witnesses asserted that they had taken it without harm, although these statements appear to have been doubted by the Edison men. The papers have certainly recorded fatal accidents from broken wires which were accidentally touched by innocent persons, and until the fact is cleared up, it might be as well to wait before making a three years' contract.

> Two meetings of the Citizen's Law and Order League will be held in this city on Sunday, in the afternoon, at Channing Church, and in the evening at West New-The object of this league is to se ton. The object of this league is to secure a respect for the law, and exact obedience to it, not only the liquor, but all the laws of the State. It is formed on such a broad basis that all order-loving citizens should give it their support and aim to encourage it in its workings. Some of the leading men in the State are members of it, one of the most noted clerical members being Rev. Phillips Brooks, and these meetings will help the people to understand its objects and the manner in which it does its work. At the Channing Church meeting, short addresses are expected from Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke, Rev. Dr. Shinn, Rev. Dr. Thomas and Rev. Mr. Nichols. Rev. Dr. Calkins would be present, but is obliged to be out of the city, and a letter from him heartily endorsing the league will be read. At the West Newton meeting, the local clergymen will also be present. and it is hoped that both meetings will be largely attended.

THE Massachusetts delegates to Chicago are surrounded by great temptations as the result of the policy of not instruct ing them for any particular candidate, but only for the one most likely to win. There are rumors of an immense pressure in favor of certain candidates of immense wealth, and the booms seem to be carried on regardless of expense. It is fortunate that our delegates are all above suspicion, or there might arise grave scandals. For the sake of the delegates themselves, the conventions hereafter should give positive instructions. There is no question but that a large majority of the people of the state are for Gresham, but it is suspected that the delegates look rather coldy more the delegates look rather coldly upon him, and that he will receive very votes from New England, unless seems certain to win.

The Newton Graphic, which we have never supposed to be agonizingly Republican, rules Mr. Depew out of the Presidential race because in 1872 he supported Greeley for the presidency. Is the Graphic aware that John D. Long did the same thing, and yet since then has been Speaker of the Massachusetts House, Lt. Governor, Governor and Congressman? Eh?—[Milford Journal.

THE GRAPHIC pleads guilty to being Republican without the agony, but our Milford contemporary missed the point of our allusion to Mr. Depew. We only suggested that as Mr. Depew's sup-porter are chiefly those who loudly as-sert that it was an unpardonable sin to bolt in 1884, they could not consistently support a man who bolted in 1872. However, we hope that this year the Republi-cans will make such excellent nomina-tions that there will be no inclination to

THE suggestion made by the GRAPHIC some weeks ago that a compromise be made and the oil lamp section be lighted by the incandescent lamps is now ren-dered feasible, as the Gas company have offered to put in the incandescent lamps in this section and to put in a plant for this special purpose. This offer is interest-ing as it is reported that the Electric Light company say that it would not pay them to take the oil lamp section alone. With the offer of a contract from the city the Gas company would have no trouble in getting permission from the Gas com-missioners to put in an electric light plant, and since this is true, the city can still have the benefit of competition, even if it is decided that we must have electric portunity for the Republicans to nominate a man of first class ability, and New ton has several who would honor the po although they are not pulling wires to secure the honor.

REPRESENTATIVE WALWORTH told a Boston reporter that his first choice for President was Depew, and his second, Gresham. A man with such sensible views ought to have been selected as a delegate to Chicago.

THE Clinton Courant accuses Brookline Chronicle of trying to reelect Mr. Burnett by its advocacy of another term for John W. Candler, and asserts that the latter's election would be more than doubtful.

MR. J. R. LEESON of this city has written an admirable article in favor of placing flax on the free list. Very little flax fibre is produced in this country, and that little is of small value to the linen manufacturers, so that even the most extreme protectionists can not defend the duty.

Over 100,000 of these safes are now in use, and the claim that they contain more improvements than any other seems to be founded on fact. An advertisement in another column calls the attention of Newton people to their special excellences, and all intending purchasers should visit their store, 64 Sudbury street, Boston. Of this number only 18 survived the hardship of winter frosts and classgoing seasons. The following gives the list of those who, by watchful care, were enabled to make a return of the plants once small and tender, but now grown to fairer and more beautiful proportions: Millie Thompson, Louisa Larned, Charles Allen, Raymond Green, May Nickerson, Gertrude Churchill, Nellie G. The exercises of the children of the primary department showed excellent training. The chorus, "Allelujah to Jesus" by the school was remarkably well sung, and also the hymn, "One more year has gone." The hymns were very appropriate for such an occasion. Miss Josie Husson acted as organist, and was accompanied by Mr. W. A. Wallis with the cornet. The floral decorations were beautiful, and consisted of "The gates ajar," platforms being enclosed with an ivy grown fence; in the centre opened the gates of white flowers, through which could be seen the picture of the Rev. S. E. Lowrey, the founder of the school and the beloved paster of the church, whose memory the people here love to keep green. Inside of the gates were two white doves, and extending over all was an arch way eight feet high, while on the back wall was the figure "27," indicating the 27 years of the schools existence. Above that were the words "One more year's work for Jesus." The whole was very handsome and tastefully arranged, and gave one the impress sion that it was intended to impress the fact that one much loved had passed through the beautiful gates. Glines, the photographer, made a picture of the decorations on Monday.

South Middlesex Unitarians.

The 71st meeting of the South Middlesex Unitarian conference was held in Watertown, Wednesday, in the Unitarian Church, 500 delegates, representing 40 churches, being in attendance. The exercises commenced with a devotional and business meeting at 9.30, conducted C. Jaynes, secretary, was read and accepted. The matter of the Stoneham Church debt was presented for special consideration, and after much discussion a vote was passed to raise the sum of $1500 in aid of its extinguishment, the amount to be levied upon the thirty-six churches comprising the conference according to the ability of each. Miss Marry Leggett, settled in Beatrice, Nebraska, also spoke in behalf of her struggling church. Mr. Staples followed by a stirring speech, alluding to the box being passed twice at the last meeting held in Newton, and the sum of $172 being raised, and hoped a similar effort might be made at the present one. A collection was then taken up amounting to $15.07, and a vote passed to give half to the church in Nebraska and the other half as usual to defray the current expenses of the conference. Next in order was the very able essay by Rev. Francis B. Hornbrooke of Newton on "The Functions of the Church." The three principal ones being the nurture and preservation of its institutions; 2d. To do practical work; 3d. Teaching the truth. The discussion was opened by Mr. Archibald Howe of Cambridge. Concluding this the large congregation was invited to the ample collation spread in the Town Hall. The afternoon exercises commenced by calling of the roll, WestNewton being represented by pastor and twenty-one delegates. Following this, resolutions of respect and sympathy were passed and voted to be sent to the Church of the Disciples and family of the late lamented Dr. Clark, Mr. E. H. Whitman then reopened the morning discussion, followed by ten minute adversess, among the most interesting of them being those of Rev. Mr. Fenn of Pittsfield, Mass., on the influence of the little band of workers with him, and of Rev. Mr. Moore in relation to the little church in Winthrop. a vote was passed to raise the sum of $1500 in aid of its extinguishment, the MEN, WOMEN & CHILDREN.

IDEALS.

Angels of growth, of old in that surprise
Of your first vision, wild and sweet,
I poured in passionate sighs
My wish unwise,
That ye descend my heart to meet.—
My heart so slow to rise!

Now thus I pray: Angelic be to hold In heaven your shining poise afar, And to my wi-hes hold, Reply with cold Sweet invitation, like a star Fixed in the heavens old.

Did ye descend, what were ye more than I? Is't not by this ye are divine, That, native to the sky, Ye cannot hie Downward, and give low hearts the wine That should reward the high?

Weak, yet in weakness I no more complain
Of your abiding in your places;
Oh! still, how'er my pain
Wild prayers may rain,
Keep pure on high the perfect graces.
That stooping could not stain.

Not to content our lowness, but to lure And lift us to your angelbood, Do your surprises pure, Dawn far and sure Above the tumult of young blood, And starlike there endure.

Wait there, wait and invite me while I climb, For see I come!—but slow, but slow! Yet ever as your chime, Soft and sublime, Yet ever as your consolers and sublines.

Soft and sublines, at my feet, they move, they go
Up the great stair of time.
DAVID A. WASSON.

[From the German.]

"My child," said old Lamberto to his daughter Giletta, "thou mayest take the one or the other.but decide thou must, and have done with it. I cannot wait until some spirit wooer comes and sues for thy hand, since nothing human seems to satisfy thee. And if I am the richest banker in Rome, and have toiled all my life to amass this wealth, it is surely not that my daughter should one day wither up as an old maid upon a pile of gold. Thou art no longer

"But father-"No longer young, I say. Thou wert born in 1766; today, therefore, thou art twenty years old. For the daughter of a millionaire that may hardly be called twenty years old. For the daughter of a millionaire that may hardly be called young. Thou dost need a husband, and I need tranquillity. The house is for ever full of wooers who flutter around thee like the moths around the light and disturb my peace. It is no longer to be endured. In heaven's name, am I a endured. In heaven's name, am 1 a stupid, wandering king, whose daughter propounds a riddle to her adorers and leaves them, if they cannot crack the nut, to be beheaded by papa? Once more I leave thee to choose, but choose they must the areas the attent. thou must, the one or the other."

But they also act like idiots. When they get sight of thee they flud no words for their lips, and devour thee with their lips, and devour thee with their lips. staring eyes. Yet they love thee, and that perhaps shows their want of sense."

"But father!" "Come now, I do but jest. Only again let me tell thee, for the third and last time, thou takest either the Count Moronti or Bertino Brandani, both charming young fellows, one of them very rich, the other a count, an impoverished nobleman, 'tis true, but we will quickly see to the regilding of the escutcheon.

but in no case longer. It looks, indeed, as if no one wanted me for father-in law. Dost wish me thus to sit patiently under a sense of neglect?"

under a sense of neglect?"
Old Lamberto printed a kiss upon the forehead of his beloved Giletta, and went off to his business, leaving the little daughter to her thoughts. And these thoughts strongly echoed her father's words. Yes, he was right. Giletta could no longer oppose so reasonable a wish; she must wed. She must raise this singer of suitors and restore once to the siege of suitors and restore quiet to the house. There was an incessant stream of wooers coming and going. They filled and overran the place. The state of things had grown insupportable, and must end. And then, too, this perpetumust end. And then, too, this perpetual difficulty of the good papa when any one proposed for her. It was becoming monotonous. "I feel myself 'greatly flattered, sir . . great honor . . . should be very happy. . . Seek to win the favorable regard of my daughter." And always the greater the crowd of lovers the greater the string of decapitations. No, it cannot, it should not consider the constant of the constant tations. No, iteratine, it adortions to a decision. Alas! were only some one to tell her who really possessed her heart. Was it, perchance, young Bertino? He was noble-minded, high-spirited, handsome, and of fine presence. But then the Count also possessed all these fine physieal and mental advantages. Yes; then he was a Count. If she married him would it not perhaps be said that she chose him for his title!

So argued and dailied the thoughts of the maiden, and not one of them was suggestive enough to bid her listen to the voice of her heart. But then in fact she had no heart, no blood, no passion. She was beautiful, and he who marked the flash of her black eyes, whose splendor contrasted strongly with the soft ivory purity of her complexion, might take lier for a woman of high feeling, a slumbering yolcano. But nature held out bering volcano. But nature held out false lights here and led the judgment astray. Giletta, by nature cold-blooded, astray. Giletta, by nature contenooded, knew love only from romanees and poems, held it for a poetic fiction, and regarded marriage as a more or less troublesome duty to which a maiden must submit at the will of her parents. Her father wished it; and Giletta made no struggle, for she was to all a good-street earlier, and deeply, entirely natured creature, and deeply, entirely devoted to her father. If only he had at least chosen for her!

"Now?" asked the banker, as he stood again before his beautiful daughter.
"I have chosen," she said quietly, and without any sign of feeling.

"Is it Countess Moronti or Signora Brandani?"

"The latter, papa, for thou seest—"
"Very good, very good, it is all the

"But he has not yet in any way declared him self, and I cannot ask for his hand."
"But 'hou canst stir him up. The Carnival has begun, in a few days there will be the flower Corso—when thou, for example—"

As he prepared to leave he was near the fifteenth thousand. "What a spend-thrift!" cried the old flower veteran, who had been listening to the conversation. "Quite early, papal" answered the little Reseda, quite as absent minded. And then through the flowers goes a strange hissing and tittering; they shake their cups and tiny blossom heads and whisper from calyx to calyx, "Hal quite ready indeed, but the great thing yet remains to be done, and that is our affair." The missiles whizz from above and below. The gentle maideus have some force in their gentle arms, and many a youth gets his eye closed and his ears tingling when a well-directed apple land upon the side of his head, but he revenges himself as he huris bouquet after bouquet in the combat. The scene is almost obscured by the flying veil or roses, carnations, filles, and narcissus. Steadily nearer moves the army of besiegers. The garrison defends itself desperately, and has armed itself with enormous syringes, and receives the stormers with whole saivos of rosewater. All in vain. The ladders are placed against the walls, and now up, in the teeth of a storm of apples, nutmegs and scented waters. Suddenly above the tumult is heard a terrible cry, "She is dying, she is dying; Reseda, Reseda!" The beantiful maiden was well known to all, a beautiful apparition. She had been called to take a post at the castle, behind a heap of earth, to collect in a mass the flower strown in. Here, in a damp, dingy place, enveloped in a dense, stifling cloud of odors, she had lost consciousness. One of the first to hear the cry for help is Bertino. With a few leaps he is over the wall, down in the flowers was the summary of the proper of all the flowers with irregular shaped cor-order of the correct and; their form compels the insect to visit the nectary in one particular manner. In the flowers of the clover, there are five petals; the upper, broad one is called the standard; the two laterallones, the wings, and the two lower ones, which are united into a boat shaped form, are called the into a boat-shaped form, are called the keel. The lower parts of the stamens are united into a tube which contains are united into a tube which contains honey; generally one or more of the stamens is detached from the others, and through the lopening thus left, the bee can insert his probosets. At maturity the anthers burst and the keel becomes filled at one end with pollen. Now comes the bee, and he naturally alights on the convenient platform of the wings; these are so connected with each other and the keel, that the latter is pressed down, and the pistil with some of the pollen is forced out in such a way as to touch the body of the visitor. In this way, as he passes from flower to flower, he continually takes on new burdens, which are deposited on new pistils. When he leaves, the elasticity of the parts brings all back to the original position, and the trap is set for the next caller. The red clover has to suffer occasionally from the inroads of a robber whose proboscis is not long enough to reach down the tube which contains the nectar. This rascal, the humblebee, gnaws a hole through the side of the flower, and rifles the treasury without compunction.

The Pansy, or Hearts-case, was specially watched by Darwin when considering the subject of insect fertilization. He reached the very curious conclusion that "a certain state of the atmosphere seems to be necessary for the secretion of nectar, and as soon as this occurs it is perceived by various insects, I presume by the odor emitted by the flowers, and these are immediately visited." The fact that insects were needed to effect fertilization, he proved by covering some of the plants in such a way as to prevent their access; in these cases only about five per cent of seeds were formed, when compared with the uncovered plants; and even these were evidently due to an accidental curling up of the petais which forced some pollen grains upon the pistill.

accidental curling up of the petals which forced some pollen grains upon the pistil.

The Horse Chestnut forms one of our most prized shade trees; in its majestic proportions, and in the beauty of its foliage and flowers, it has few equals. Its native place is Northern India, and it owes its introduction to Europe, to the peculiar interest in science which the warlike Alexander displayed. He alone of all the worlds great conquerers, systematically organized a corps of scientific observers to attend his armies; the conquests of this corps were made for all time, while those made by his soldiers were soon lost. Along the shores of the Ohio, grows a near relative of this tree, the Buckeye, which has given a nickname to the State. The nuts of these trees are so full of farinaceous matter, and so abundant, that it would seem a question of some interest to devise a means of counteracting the bitter taste. When the ingenuity of man has been able to procure cassava and tapioca from plants so poisonous that their juices are used to tip the spears and arrows of savage tribes, it certainly should be able to remove a simple bitterness from these nuts.

We cannot take space to introduce age tribes, it certainly should be able to remove a simple bitterness from these nuts.

We cannot take space to introduce each one of our list to-day, but we would not neglect the modest Oxalis. This is the real Sorrei, from whom the Rumex, already notice & sole the name, owing to the resemblance in taste of its leaves. This plant is considered by many as the true shamrock, and it was certainly held in high veneration in ancient Gaul. Its leaves resemble the clover, though they are smaller and more delicate; at hightfall they fold together, and droop into a very graceful sleen. In the early morning, its bright yellow eyes look up throthe overhanging blades of grass, but as though trightened at the great staring sun, they soon grow dull and wither away. The Rhubarb, originally from Tartary, the Hedge Mustard, a native of England, and the Red Currant an autochthonned no introduction to our readers. The Robins' plantain is the first flowering species of a genus that will call for some remarks later in the season. The Fittle Speedwell is like many an individual met with in daily life; quiet, unobtrusive, uninteresting, therefore little noticed, and about whom there is very little said. We are, however, not a behever in the adage, "Happy the nation that has no history."

—Last Sunday being the sixty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the Baptist Sunday School, it was decided that that day should also be celebrated as the children's day. At seven p. m. Associates' Hall was filled with the Sunday School and its friends. The first thing to be noticed was the decorations, which were remarkably pretty. They were arranged by Miss Niekerson and Miss Homes, and were admired by every one. A mound of daises and ferns in the centre of the platform reached nearly to the top of the pulpit, and from this mound to the ends of the platform was a border of the same flowers. At the ends were groups of palms and hydrangeas. The exercises were opened by singing a chorus, with a solo by Mrs. Mansfield. This was followed by a prayer by President Teff of the Hartshorn Memorial College in Virginia, founded by one of our citizens. Mr. Asa W. Armington, superintendent of the school, read responsively with the children, music being interspersed with the reading. There were a few little pieces well given by the children. Edith Parker was the first, she spoke about the lillies and was followed by little Nelson Morton, son of the librarian on the Hill. His advice was very good, so good that the speaker of the evening prophesied that he might sometime become president of the Institution. Six little girls followed, earrying flowers. Each spoke of her special flower, and as they passed from the platform left their flowers on the pulpit. It was all very pretty. Hon. Chester W. Kingsley, U. S. Senator from Cambridge, then unde an address to the children, keeping them interested to the last. Reclamel C. Barnes, pastor of the church, spoke a few words, Illustration and Fannie Edmunds also sang together very nicely. Mr. Goorge Walton, the tenor of the church, directed all the chorus singing. There were little cards given to every one, showing the state of the Sun

The building occupied by Messrs, Green wood & Co, has been successfully moved this week to its new location, it having been moved toward Walnut street fifteen feet, toward Luncoin street six feet, and lowered one and one half feet. It has not as vet been fully decided whether the new block will be built of wood or brick—probably the latter. The pians have been prepared, and estimates of the cost of a wooden building have been made by builders, making the cost largely in excess of the amount of what the architect assured the owners it could be built for. It is hoped that there will be no delay in building, as the premises now present a very unsightly appearance.

LASELL'S COMMENCEMENT.

THE IMPORTANT EVENTS OF THE WEEK AT THE SEMINARY.

Commencement week at Lasell has brought a crowd of visitors to Auburn-dale, and the beautiful weather has aided to make the events of the week suc-cessful and enjoyable. The baccalaure-ate sermon on Sunday by Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody was a fit opening to the week, and his earnest words will long remain in the memory of the graduates and their friends. The report of the address will be found on another page.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES. Monday evening in the gymnasium, in the presence of a large number of relative and friends. The platform was prettily decorated and upon it sat the graduates, attired in cassocks and mortar boards, and the exercises began with the address of Miss A. Lena Jones, the president of the class, who gave a neatly phrased welcome to the audience.

the address of Miss A. Lena Jones, the president of the class, who gave a neatly phrased welcome to the audience.

At the conclusion of her oration, Miss Bertha Simpson proceeded to call the roll, to which, as each maiden responded, she lisped out a quotation of prose or verse, with more or less relevancy to the occasion—as a rule considerably less, if the truth be told. Miss Annie Gwinnell next unfolded the eventful history of a remarkable class, and then, as a preparation for the awful disclosures that were to be derived from an omniscient statistician's report. Miss Hogg interposed a delicately tender and soothing song. Miss Cole then opened up her assortment of statistical information, and such delicately tender and soothing reportient matters as the size of foot and hand, the weight and masculine predilections of various of the graduating Lasell'ites were heartlessly declared upon the housetops, metaphorically speaking, Miss White had bound the sybil's scattered leaves into a compendious and instructive volume, and having taken a bird's eye view of futurity, she outlined with minute attention to detail the career of her classmates, one of whom would be an associate in office of President Belva Lockwood, another a ballet dancer by evolution from a teacher of gymnastics, etc. But by resting upon the scriptural assertion that "whether there shall be prophecies, they shall fail," the maidens whose doom appeared to be sealed accented them with ease and unconcern. Miss Brown next produced a basket of mementoes and endowed each sister, in a neat speech, with an appropriate gift, not forgetting to bestow a set of dishes on the girl who loved nocturnal and sub rosa feasts, nor a monkey in effigy to her who revelled in the harmonies of a hand organ. Miss Anne Bushnell read the last will and testament of this remarkable class, and then, to the cheerful strains of Mendelssohn's "Funeral March," the company betook themselves out of doors, headed by a troop of forch-bearing damsels, and their the class Day exertises to Principal and Mrs. Bragdon gave a reception to the class of '88 and their friends, Tuesday evening, the members of the Junior class acting as ushers.

The entire lower floor of the seminary was thrown open for the reception of guests, and there was a stream of visitors all the evening, displaying the fact that whatever other failings the class of '88 may by any posibility be conceived to have, it is not the failing of their friends to be on hand and up to time when a reception is in progress. Among the several hundred who lent their presence were Professor Luquiens of the Institute of Technology with his wife, Dr. Belows of the Boston University's school of Medicine, Judge Park and wife of Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Bushpenol of Saybrook, and many others. The rooms were gracefully decked with smilax, roses, fuschias and other shrubs, and abundant refreshments were screed in the larce dining hall. The costumes of the young seminarians were scarcely less becoming than the Oxford can and gown of class day, and that assumes to mean and to say a great deal.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The 33rd annual commencement exercises at Lasell were held Wednesday morning in the Congregational church, Anburndale. The church was completely filled with friends of the pupils and of the school, the faculty and members on the right of the pupili, and the school, the faculty and members of the board of trustees occupying seats on the right of the pupili, and the students and alumnae on the left.

The members of the faculty included Prof. C. C. Bragdon, the principal of the seminary, Prof. J. W. Hills, Prof. J. W. Davis, Miss Carpenter, Miss Scudder, Miss Richardson, Miss Corey and Miss Blaisdell. The board of trustees was represented by Messys, Tower, Everetts, E. W. Gay and George Eager. The exercises opened with a selection by the Boston Cadet orchestra, which was followed by prayer by Rev. Dr. W. J. Clarke of Newton Centre. A second selection by the orchestra preceded the commencement address by Miss Sarah F. Smilley. Her subject was, "Woman's Wisdom Buildeth Her House," It was an able and interesting paper, full of sugestions and good advice to the students. The "good-by" for the class was delivered by Miss Emma Josephine Wallace, Allusion was made to the pleasant relations existing between the seniors and the teachers, of the kindness and sympathy of their instructors during the progress of their studies and of the sorrow at parting with pleasant friends who had become endeared to them during their school life. The exercises closed with the presentation of diplomas to the graduating class by Prof. Bragdon.

A list of the graduates and the subject of their essays is appended. Many of the papers written were very interesting, and they were placed upon the library table in the seminary for the inspection of relatives and friends.

Josephine E. Baker. Rockford, Ill., "The University, Annient and Modern;" Susannah J. Brown, Philadelphia, Pa., "George Eliot's Men and Women:" Anne O. Bushnell, Saybrook, Ct., "A Century of New England Literature;" Mary L. Cole, Roxbury, Manss., "Chercier and Later English Poets:

—Last Sunday, Children's day was celebrated at the Baptist church by a concert in the evening. The platform was beautifully decorated with flowers, a large bank of them being formed on one side, and numerous large bouquets placed around. The dark blue hangings back of the platform trimmed with snowballs, etc., made an effective background for the children, who, promptly at 7 o'clock, marched in singing, and took their places. They each wore a bunch of flowers and seemed to thoroughly appreciate that it was their day. The singing and recitations were entirely by the little ones, with the exception of a chant and part of the responsive reading, by the choir in the gallery. Max Overman gave a "Boy's sermon," and Miss Ethel Lentell "A Child's Thoughts' about flowers, which was given very distinctly, and with excellent expression. A recitation concerning around one, burke error with extending the content of the same of the child flowers. The recitation described God's love as shown in all these flowers, and the fifth little girl summed up the whole. Mr. Stephen Moore, the superintendent of the school, gave a short talk to the little ones, and that means everybody enjoyed him. His address was short, and consisted mainly of stories right to the point. The exercises closed with singing by the congregation and the benefitched and carried out by Mr. H. F. #### DR. FIELD WELCOMED HOME.

AFTER HIS WINTER'S ABSENCE IN CALI-FORNIA.

A reception was tendered to Dr. Henry M. Field and family on Tuesday evening, by a few of their many friends in the city. It was given in the suite of rooms occupied by Dr. Field and Mr. Rand in Brackett's new block. The committee in charge was Mr. Rand, Dr. J. F. Frisbie, and Chas. A. Drew, Esq. On account of the smallness of the room where the supper was to be served, the invitations were limited to about seventyfive, and among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Billings, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Davis, Mr. Billings, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Drew, Mr. and Mrs. E. Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Field, Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Frisbie, Rev. D. L. Sengl K. Richardson, Rev. H. G. Spaulding and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weston, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Whiton. At 8 o'clock the guests began to arrive and were received by Dr. and Mrs. Field and Mr. Eliot Field, and an hour later supper was served by Paxton in the large corner room, each lady receiving as she entered a handsome corsage bouquet, and each gentleman a boutonniere. The long ta-bles and all the rooms were profusely decorated with flowers. Rev. Mr. Spaulding invoked a blessing, and after a pleasant hour at the tables, Mr. Rand, as chief conspirator—or rather master of ceremo-nies, called upon the friends present to drink to the health of the returned travellers, but nothing stronger than water was used. After a few appropriate words of welcome, he called upon Prof. J. K. Richardson to extend to Dr. Field formal welcome of the company,

Dr. Field rose to reply amid hearty applause, and his words expressed his pleasure at being once more with his friends, and in a very feeling manner he thanked them for the warmth of their thanked them for the warmth of their welcome. He gave a brief account of their journey through California, and

Mr. Rand caused quite a laugh by dismeeting in Chaming church, Sunday after, noon, only called out a small audience, as the hour at which it was shell was inconvenient to most people. —At Grace church, Sunday evening, the double quartet will sing for the last time the double quartet will sing for the last time.

A balmy day in this glad month of all the year, Yet balmier today than it is wont to be, Familiar voices tall upon the ear; Familiar faces we rejoice to see!

Mayhap it is a passing dream,
For dreams oft deceive us in our sleeping hours.
But a sweet fragrance, as of orient flowers Comes floating from some sunnier clime, 1 ween.

Yet e'en as straws point the wind's path in its flight So, little tokens we have seen tonight; Dispei the possibility of dreaming, And make a bright reality of present seeming.

If, from the sunshine, flowers drink brighter hues.
Then, without saying, this may go;
Our friends come not from regions of perpetual snow.

Word-pictures from the control ing, ing, Whose impress on our memory still is burning.

Of roses, calla hedges, cactus bloom.

Acres of golden poppies wanting only room,
Fragrance and beauty more than can be tolel,
As wonderful as wealth of Californian gold!

But now we read in letters not of ink and pen. The sequel of what we were reading then. The radience of that sunny southern sky. Rests now upon their brows, and gladdens every eye.

Welcome, we bring you, pilgrims from the golden gate!
Welcome and rest awhile, anon you climb the mountain stde
Remembering, tho' the earth be wide,
For your return, home-friends will love to wait.

The poem was greeted with much applause, after which Mr. Spaulding read the following poem, which he wrote for the occasion:

TO HENRY M. FIELD, M. D. BY REV. HENRY G. SPAULDING. Read at the welcome-home supper, June 19, 1888.

Read at the welcome-home supper, June 19, 188s.
Sometimes we welcome friends who've crossed that the sea.
And who bring back to their "ain countree"
Stranger, and who bring back to their "ain countree"
We treat them in the way to catch a bird:—
Upon the tale a little salt we spread,
(Of course we "catch it"—well,—enough is said)
But the good friend we welcome here tonight
But the good friend we welcome here tonight
He has not left for once Columbia's land, Though with his loved and loving household band
He's wandered farther than old England lies
From the New England she begins to prize.
From the New England she begins to prize.
A way from home he's strayed, lared by the wiles
The Californians play, when from the East
West wonderland a strange and curious state!
A vast expanse of things both rare and great;
A poiden garden with enchanted bowers!
There blooms the citron, spreads the mighty oak,—
There flounds the citron, spreads the mighty
There frontful vines astonish eastern folk

And its delicious, saving climate try.
Yet, Doctor, ere we turn our faces west,
We'll think betimes of things that here are best.
Is aught on earth so perfect, bright and sweet
As one New England June day, all complete?
Where smiles a fairer landscape, where are skies Told rature's leantly' where are trees or flowers.
Or verdant meadows to compare with ours?
And if you say, our summer soon is o'er.
Of Autumn glories we've abundant store.
Fe'en when old winter rules with ley reign,
And in the short cold days we all would fair
To warmer regions fee-yet, even then,
We've blessings here that gladden thoughtful men;

So here, dear doctor, in this northern clime, Where human life is measured not by time That's spent in idling under sunny skies, But by the things that make men strong and wise.

That's spent in idling under sunny skies, But by the things that make mea strong and wise.

Take wise, any your blessed work—take hold with us to torify the dear home fold; And make New England, in the years to come, so good that none from her shall wish to roam.

Ex-Alderman Powers was next called upon to give Dr. Field a sort of official welcome for the city, which he did in a very cordial manner. Judge Pitman was called on to respond for the laddies, which he declined to do, as he thought the ladies present were abundantly qualified to speak for themselves, but nevertheless he made a very pleasant speech.

Dr. J. F. Frisbie closed the list of speakers, with some warm words of welcome, and then gave a very charming allegory in allusion to the roses of which Dr. Field has written so often and so enthusiastically. The reception broke up about 11 o'clock, and was one of the pleasantest social events held in Newton for a long time.

Manual Training in Our Public Schools.

the beauty of the foliage and flowers, especially the roses, which lined the paths and highways, and some of them grew to the size of a man's het. ton in outward things, and of the greatest bodily activity—the objective period it has been called by students of life. Later, comes the period of thought, reflection, and greater repose; so that the older fly from a city holiday celebration as eagerly as youth fly to it. Activity with the hands, a desire to be doing something, is thus an instinct of boyhood. "I love to see things doing." the natural remark of a very small boy. A facetious editor put it thus, "When four boys say, 'come, let's do something,' some honest citizen will be likely to be swearing within an hour." But this only shows that the crude instinct of boy-activity needs directing by a sym-pathetic superior intelligence.

While, then, sewing of certain kinds, and under certain conditions, is a very and under certain conditions, is a very proper and useful element of a boy's training, it seems a pity that so much, both of energy and capacity, as the boys's sewing at the Bigelow school exhibition indicated, should not have a still fuller andmore distinctively appropriate outlet. But just here, there needs to be distinctly stated some elementary fixed principle, to reduce to order the chaotic state of public opinion, which is too vaguely tossing to and fro on the subject of industrial training, from that of those who think there should be much of it everywhere, to those who think there should be none of it anywhere.

Ist. Study of human life shows that some can think well in things, that is, can do or make things, who cannot think well in words—that is, who cannot speak or write well. Their intelligence can express itself through their hands better than through speech, whether spoken or written.

2d. In dense industrial communities, like Lowell, Worcester, Chicopee, Newark, etc., where it is reasonable to assume that amajority of children will remain in industrial life—under the free operation of circumstances, and not through the action of arbitrary social laws—special schools of manual training may, in the absence of the apprenticeship system, well be established to teach the principles and the elements of the practice of all the leading skilled industries of the locality.

3d. It can, however, never be too often rehearsed, or constantly remembered, or thoroughly believed, that real life is the most real and efficient of all schools, as witness forever Franklin, Roger Sherman, Webster, Lincoln, and a great host of the famous self-made men in every department of life, as against the more bookish and less practical Jefferson, Sumner, Seward, and a host of the too exclusively school-trained. Accordingly, therefore, the shop, the store, the sea, and the farm are the most true and real schools for the mechanic, the merchant, the sailor and the farmer, and should never be superseded by book-schools as the only or chief places of preparation for these pursuits. Those, especially, who show small aptitude for working in things, should be set to learn some trade as the real and proper school for a great many things. Heaven pity those to whom it is not such, whether owings and degradation, or to working in things, should be set to learn some trade as the real and groperly attended to, the fact that some thing the degradation and the farmer, and some trade as the real and properly attended to, the fact that some think through their hands better than in words, and should hings befter things ow this foolless were should be the best school for a great men properly attended to, the fact that some think through their hands better than in words, and know things befter that some think through their hands better than in words, and know things to extend the words in least the words of darker, or service, and

For the coming year those who wish admittance should make their applications as early as possible, that arrangements may be made. Two pupils have this year been sent to Harvard, one to the Institute of Technology, and a number have been presented for preliminary examinations. With Mr. Cutler's long and remarkably successful experience in preparatory work, better advantages for pupils could not be desired.

Mr. Arthur T. Hill of Auburndale conducted the services of the Y. M. C. A. at Eliot Lower Hall, Sunday afternoon. "Obedience is the watchword of every true Christian soldier." Mr. Hill spoke of the ITh of June as a day we remember because of those noble men, who at the call of duty, sacrified their lives at Bunker Hill, Charlestown. The illustrations were good, and right to the point. A number present spoke upon the same subject, and the meeting was helpful. Next Sunday Rev. F. Nichols will preach.

NEWTON HIGH SCHOOL BATTAL-

THE SIXTH ANNUAL PRIZE DRILL AT WEST NEWTON.

The sixth annual prize drill of the Newton High School Battalion was held upon the grounds of the Eliot estate, West Newton. Saturday afternoon. It is a beautifully situated place with a vast stretch of lawn leading from a substan-tial mansion which occupies a promi-nent position in the background. The land is level, sloping slightly towards the street and seems especially adapted for the movements of a military organization, the view being unobstructed and the space being ample for execution of wheels and company marching. Along the boundary of the estate on Waltham the boundary of the estate on Waitham street, beautiful trees are so situated that a natural shade is afforded. Under-neath these trees the settees for the guests were arranged, stretching along six or seven deep for a considerable distance. The exercises commenced at 2.30 and the spectators who had been pour-ing on to the grounds soon filled every available seat, while others were content to stand up upon the broad stone wall or seek some shady and secluded spot where they could watch the movements of the battalion. It is estimated that about 2000 persons witnessed the exercis es. Many ladies were present, including past and present pupils of the High School, their parents and numerous friends. The distinguished guests included Mayor Kimball, Aldermen Tyler and Nickerson, Councilmen Hunt and Powell, Mr. E. W. Converse, Mr. C. C. Barton of the school board, and Mr. Fisher Ames Mr. E. S. Goodwin, principal of the High School, Rev. Pleasant Hunter, Jr., Maj. Lawrence and many

The first feature of the afternoon was a battalion drill, under the command of Major Bowen B. Smith, the company movements and the manual of arms being well executed. There is a noticeable improvement iu the steadiness and military deportment of the boys and the ex-hibition of drilling reflected no small amount of credit upon the battalion and evidenced careful training and evident determination to bring out the best re-

The competitive company drill was next in order. Co. D., Capt. J. Wallace Goodrich, marched out upon the field and gave an exhibition of drill and company movements. Co. C., Capt. Sever-ance Burrage, followed with a similar exhibition, both commands acquitting themselves creditably. At the conclusion of this feature of the exercises, the Salem Cadet Band, Jean Missud, leader, played selections. The music was finely rendered and a generous measure of ap Salem Cadet Band, Jean Missud, leader, played selections. The music was finely rendered and a generous measure of applause indicated the appreciation and approval of the large company present.

Next on the program came the competitive individual drill by a picked squad of 42, under command of Adjutant Winthrop B. Greene. Upon the breast of each manly form, a numbered tag was placed for the inspection of the judges, and woe to the poor fellew who made a mistake. The squad went through the manual of arms with the precision of regulars, and it required the acute judgment of the military experts to detect the errors, not considering, of course, those palpable mistakes which are obvious even to the civilian. These latter errors, however, were few and far between, and the boys were deserving of the hearty applause which greeted their efforts. The squad marched off the field, the band playing a lively air. Great interest was manitested to see how many of the original number would return. When the squad marched back and resumed the contest for individual honors, it was discovered that fourteen of the original number and dropped out. Four times they marched on and off the field until of the original number only eight remained, three of whom were to win laurels for their proficiency in the drill.

The company exercises were then resumed. Co. E., Capt. William E. Scales; Co. A., Capt. Fred. S. Keith; Co. B., Capt. Clarence B. Ashenden; each in turn giving exhibitions of company movements and drill in the manual of arms. The latter company made a most soldierly appearance, and the Graphic man found they were great favorites with the fair sex. Many pretty girs expressed their preference for some of the other companies.

At the conclusion of the company drill, the band rendered a fine selection, after which the bayonet squad, under command of Maj. Bowen B. Smith, gave a very fine exhibition of drilling. The movements were cleverly executed, the charging and guarding being especially commendable features.

Next in order came ments and drill in the manual of arms. The latter company made a most soldierity apperance, and the Graphic man found they were great favorites with the fair sprize, and others, of course, viewed the hope that Co. B. wound win the first prize, and others, of course, viewed the matter in a little different light, and expressed the hope that Co. Next in order came the review of the battalion by Charles Ward Fost C. the victorial of the seats reserved for the spectators. The usual dress parade took place, the report of a cannon concluding the imposing military spectacies.

Mayor Kimball then proceeded to award the prizes and in a neat speech, expressed the congratulations of those present upon the successal attained by the fign School batallion. It is because of your sincere and hard work, because of your sincere and hard work, because of your sincere and hard work, because of the propriety. #### DANGEROUS FOOD ADULTERATION.

THE FRAUDULENT USE OF ALUM AND LIME IN CHEAP BAKING POWDERS.

ated article of food because it can be had at a lower price, they undoubtedly have the right to do so, provided the adulterants are not of a character injuri-ous to health. If such articles are not falsely sold as pure, and the customer is not deceived as to their real character, the transaction is not illegitimate.

But the great danger in the traffic in adulterated food arises from the deception that is practised by manufacturers usually classing such goods as pure. This is almost invariably done when the adulterant is one that is injurious to health. for instance, manufacturers of alum and lime baking powders not only fail to inform the public of the real character of their goods, but carefully conceal the fact that they are made from these poisonous articles. Most of these manufacturers also claim that their articles are pure and wholesome, while some go still further and proclaim boldly that they are cream of tartar goods, or even the genuine Royal Baking Powder itself. No consumer will buy alum baking powders knowingly, for it is well understood that they are detrimental to health. The sale of alum and lime baking powders as pure and wholesome articles is, therefore, criminal, and it is satisfactory to notice have already been brought to justice in that several persons engaged in such sale have already been brought to justice in the courts.

The official analysts have recently been active in the pursuit of these dishonest articles. The baking powders of several States have been carefully and critically examined. The officials are surprised at the large amount of lime and alum goods found. It is a suggestive fact that no baking powder except the Royal has been found without either lime or alum, and many contain both. Dr. Price's baking powder has been found to contain nearly 12 per cent. of lime; Cleveland's 11 per cent. of impurities; the phosphate powders over 12 per cent. of lime. The chief service of lime is to add weight. It is true that lime, when subjected to heat, gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left—a caustic of most powerful nature. A small quantity of dry lime upon the tongue, or in the eye, produces painful effects; how much more serious must these effects be on the delicate membanes of the stomach, intestines and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when the lime is taken into the system day after day, and with almost every meal. This is said by physicians to be one of the causes of indigestion, dyspepsia, and those painful diseases of the kidneys now so prevalent.

Adulteration with lime is quite as much to be dreaded as with alum, which your excellent officers and I may add, efficient military instructor, that you have wen honor upon this occasion. During the time that military instruction has been introduced into the High School, the views of citizens have differed as to its propriety. I hope that there may be those here who are not in favor of military drill as well as those who take an apposite view, to witness your excellent appearance and successful drill. I believe that military drill should be recognized as a study in the High School the same as any other study that is taught. Its purpose is not in educating young men to fight, but in teaching them to obey. I see veterans here today and I know that they would vote against war, that they love peace, yet should the necessity arise they would not forget their duty to their country. And so, I hope your successors will be as earnest and loyal as you have been.

The Mayor then proceeded to award the company prizes. The first prize, a sword and belt, was won by company B, and a medal was presented to Lieut.

EXTENDING AUSTIN STREET

MR, T. H. CARTER CALLS ATTENTION TO ITS IMPORTANCE.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

Some seven years ago I out a continuation of Austin street, from Walnut street, Newtonville, to Greenwood avenue, West Newton, that every body approved. As a committee of the Newtonville Improvement Association, W. I. Towne, Henry Ross and Chas. T. Pulsifer said of it: "The more we have looked into it, the more impor-tant it seems to us, for this village and for Newton, best at present and for the future that the Carter plan should be adopted." This road way, T. M. Clark, acting on a plan of which the same committee at the same time reported, "It could never be satisfactory to the village, city, or owners of land in the locality," and recommended the Newtonville Improvement Association, Wm. Claffin, president, to remonstrate against it, and to unite in the petition for the Carter road, which they did, and the subject has remained dormant until now, when has remained dormant until now, when Mr. Clark having apparent control of a section of my road, is endeavoring to make it impossible to pass that way, and compel the adoption of his, in which the interest of the city has, in my judgment, a large stake. On my plan of road-ways I had some 15 years ago, not only spent on this road and buildings some $90 000. this road and buildings some $20,000 but the city in consequence in-creased the tax valuation some $20,000 dollars, which has been collected to this day, without the city spending a dollar upon it, until making an unfin-ished road of 300 feet last year.

Deeming my straight road important to all, and Mr. Clark apparently bent on stop-ping it, though largely against his own interest, in my judgment, I last year got ping it, though argely against its own interest, in my judgment, I last year got up the following paper and sent it to him and to the city government, thinking that when he saw the prevailing sentiment he would change his plans; but it makes no difference, and my conviction of its importance to the city is such, that I feel it a duty to make the subject understood if I can.

Newton is in its youth; its growth cannot be stopped without removing further from Boston; it would not surprise me to be told that in no distant future. Austin street would connect with Auburn street and reach Auburndale, and thence to the Falls, Centre and Corner, to pass over the railroad at north Ida, and a line of street cars connect all the villages both side the rails, returning over the Greenwood avenue pass. If Laomi Baldwin was in this world I should want to engage him as consulting engineer.

The following letter substantially I ad-

LEFTER TO PRESIDENT BLISS.

Wm. Bliss, Esq., President Boston & Albany Railroad,
Dear Sir:—Please allow me to name some of the reasons I think in favor of going over the rails at the Greenwood avenue crossing, West Newton.

At that crossing the ground is high on one side with material to spare for the other side, and of such importance to the city of Newton that I have no doubt the city would unite in accomplishing the object; both would be greatly benefited thereby, otherwise that crossing must before long be made a flag crossing, the maintaining of which might perhaps cost as much as the interest of the outlay with only half its benefits. To go over the rails at that point would greatly relieve the crossings at Newtonville square and at West Newton, which are in use most of the time.

South of the rails there is now no pass between these rapidly growing villages; all intercourse between them must cross the rails at Newtonville, to muddy, dusty, crowded Washington street, and there being no yards or stores on the south side, all lumber and building materials of all kinds, fuel, furniture &c., must pass that crossing, also all carriages from the north to the trains and deport; and when its considered that it is less than 40 years since it was Hull's crossing, with flag man but no depot whatever, it will be seen that within half another 40 years the road we are urging will become a necessity and could not possibly ail to be of great benefit to both railroad and city for all time. Would not, Dear Sir, the railroad take an interest in this view. Respectfully, T. H. Carter.

James R. Carter Dexter R. Puffer, E. W. Greene, George Frost, J. W. Stover, Geo. W. Morse, C. E. Quinge, Henry F. Ross, M. W. Chase, J. H. Hunting, I. M. Siles, R. B. Tainter, A. A. Savage, J. T. Pulsifer, D, H. Fitch, Edwin W. Gay A. Phipps,

C.S. Pulsifer A. Phipps,

Petitions for both these roadways are now before the city government the same as six years ago, and every day since has shown the wisdom of my road and the absolute wrong to the city and to citizens of Mr. Clarke's, and we believe certainly extremely unwise as regards his own interest, which he is aware we have made friendly efforts to show him.

T. H. CARTER, Newtonville, June 20, 1888.

Nothing like it, pleasant to take, small doses, good results, is the verdict by all who use Ingalls' Mandrake Compound.

Now laughs the sun; the south-wind blows; Three merry maids hang out the clothes; Miranda, Maud, and Madaline; They hear the village clock ring nine. Ouoth Maud: "Why are we done so soon? The washing used to last till noon?" Two rosy mouths in chorus ope, "Oh! now we use the Ivory SOAP."

A WORD OF WARNING

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'lvory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "lvory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

THE GRAPHOPHONE.

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW REPEATER OF

Mr. Melville A. Richards of West Newthe exhibition of the American Graphophone. Some private exhibitions were given at his residence in this city, and this week other exhibitions have been given at 298 State street, Boston. The old Edison phonograph everybody in-terested in the march of inventive minds of course knows about—knows that on a cylinder about three inches in diameter, spirally grooved, covered with tinfoil, travelling horizontally and opeits talking and if anything is lost the diaphragm may be moved backward and a repetition of the words obtained. In receiving the method is very easy. The sound comes back through a soft rubber tube divided into two branches, an end of each branch having an opening of hard rubber which may be loosely lodged into the lobes of either ear, leaving the arms free for the manipulation of either the type-writer or the pen.

Another practical use of the graphophone is in the way of direct private correspondence. Every machine is made exactly alike in proportions and adjustment. Mr. A in Boston can talk to his machine and mail the wax cylinder to Mr. B in Omaha at a cost of 2 cents, where Mr. B having another machine of the sort, can get the communication in the speaker's own voice and with the exact emphasis. A whistling test was made with successful results. Cornet playing, singing, and in fact anything that can be classed under the comprehensive word of "sound," are also as successfully produced.

WASHINGTON IN ART

PAPER READ BEFORE THE NEWTON HIGHLANDS Y. P. S. C. E., FEBRU-ARY 22, 1888.

A beautiful miniature of Washington at the age of twenty-five, and the earliest representation of him known to exist, has been attributed to John Single ton Copley, who was born in 1737 and died in 1815. It was one of the earlier productions and yet it possesses his distinctive characteristics. This picture experienced many vicissitudes. On one while on a boating excursion off the coast of Maine, where he was drowned. Although his body was not recovered for several days, the miniature was found entirely uninjured in its gutta-percha case. It is painted on ivory and is in a perfect state of preservation. Authorities differ as to whether this miniature was painted by Copley or Charles Wilson Peale: but evidence is in favor of Cop-

Charles Wilson Peale painted fourteen portraits of Washington, the one pro-nounced the best being known as the Virginia Colonel portrait. In 1791 the City Council of Charleston, S. C., requested Washington to permit his por trait to be painted by John Trumbull, to which he assented. The artist selected the field of Trenton on which to present his portrait in the full glory of military fame. It was enthusiastically approved by Washington, who had on more than one occasion indicated his preference to being deliniated as the defender of his country

It was a faithful portrait. Authorities agree in pronouncing this the most trustworthy type of that majestic form. Near Washington stands an attendant with his horse. The old mill, the artillery, the river and the fires by which the enemy were deceived are seen in the background. It is just at sunset, and at the suggestion of Washington, several the suggestion of Washington, several events of that evening are introduced. The various portraits of Washington, painted by Trumbull, are strong in enartage of close intimacy with Washington, his portraits are natural and spirited. Gilbert Stuart painted many portraits of Washington, representing him as General of the Continental Army, and President of the United States. The most famous portrait is the simple head, termed the Athenian portrait. The portrait was ordered by Mrs. Washington; but Stuart saw the value of the original as a famous portrait is the simple head, termed the Athenian portrait. The portrait was ordered by Mrs. Washington; but Stuart saw the value of the original as a "nest egg" as he called it, and it is said that he resorted to subterfuge by leaving the background of this portrait and that of Mrs. Washington, that they might never be delivered. He bothered Washington so by his delays, in order to retain the picture, that the latter told him rather curtly to finish it at his leisure and send it to him.

Miss Jane Stuart's version is, that on her father telling Washington that the original would be of great value to him, Washington consented to his retaining them and making copies.

Stuart did not realize so large a sum for these portraits as he expected. It is said that an English gentleman offered ten thousand dollars for them soon after they were painted but it was refused, and not long after the death of the artist, the State of Massachusetts wished to purchase them for two thousand dollars. In 1831 they were bought by the Washington Associates of Boston, and presented to the Atheneum for safe keeping. They are now in the Art Museum.

The portrait of Washington has been painted by over forty artists, representing America, England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Sweden, Denmark and Switzerland. More than twenty sculptors have executed busts, statues and monuments, including Canova. Houdon, Chartey, Crawford, Greenough, Clark, Mills, Ward and Thomas Ball.

Miss Elizabeth Bryant Johnston, whose exhaustive work on the portraits of Washington has been of great service in these researches, says of the statue by Canova, that upon its arrival in this country in 1824, it was transported with triumphal honors from Wilmington to Raleigh, drawn by a team of twenty-four mules, and was placed with appropriate ceremony in the State House.

June 12, 1831, the building was burned and the statue unfortunately destroyed.

Washington's was a face and form to inspire both artist and sculptor with a desire to reach the highest ideal in his wo

"Warner's Safe Cure,"

A very busy Chicago banker was to be married to an Omaha girl, and the day fixed was June 4 at high noon. The day came, but the groom did not materialize, and at 9 o'clock a. m. this telegram was received: "For Heaven's sake tell us what is the matter. This is your wedding day, and the hour approaches." He was scared half out of his wits, and bounced around like a hen with her head cut off. Then he rushed to the telegraph office and sent this answer: "Thought I had three days of grace. Don't let it go to protest. Coming on the next train." The wedding was late, but it was a merry one, and all was forgiven.—[Washington Critic.

THE DRAPER BOOM.

The papers in the immediate vicinity of General Draper's home are getting greatly excited over his boom and its progress, and evidently think that they have got hold of a lever that is to move the State. They probably have good reason for their enthusiasm but the cause of their inspiration has not yet extended outside of the immediate vicinity of

The Milford Journal has this week a The Milford Journal has this week a very hysterical article on "the false logic" of giving the governorship another year to Governor Ames because he has held it for two years, and it unkindly recalls the reason why the party first nominated Mr. Ames, namely, because of his wealth. This naturally brings up the rumor that Gen. Draper has promised to pay the expenses of the campaign if he is nominated, so that his friends ought really not to say much against the policy of nominating a man because he is rich. The Milford paper grows very pathetic over the sure thing that the Republican nominee will have this year, and the danger that the Democrats will win in the year following, when it hears that Leopold Morse is to be the Democratic candidate, who will be backed up by "the wealthy Jews all overithe country." It thinks it would be a dreadful risk and also very expensive to put a new man "against such a candidate and such a "against such a candidate and such a combination," and begs that Gen. Draper be given at least one term before such a crisis comes, especially as the Republican nominee will have such a sure thing this fall.

These are not all the dangers apprehended by the Milford paper, which evidently sees a spook in every bush, for the company of the paper of the company of the company and the company and the company are always as a planning.

idently sees a spook in every bush, for it hints that Governor Ames is planning to succeed Senator Hoar; that he has crowded Mr. Long out of Congress, "by some sort of hocus pocus," and that certain managers in the Republican party are possessed by the idea that the party is their own personal property." This of course is very sad for those who are out and want to get in, and must be very aggravating to General Draper and his personal friends who hope for so much personal friends who hope for so much from his nomination.

As an entirely disinterested party our advice would be for the Draper boomers to wait two or three years, until their candidate becomes known by name at least to the voters in the State, and thus their ambitious projects could be gratiged at much less expense and with far less effort. They are now rowing against the tide, for Governor Ames has made a a very acceptable governor; he is much stronger with the voters than on his first nomination, and there seems to be no good public reasons for making a change. We were not enthusiastic over the first nomination of Mr. Ames, but the uniform excellence of his administration has won general approbation, and it will compare favorably with those of his predecessors. If he has not been so liberal with campaign subscriptions as the political of the compared to the compare stronger with the voters than on his first with campaign subscriptions as the polidential year, and as President Foster of the Republican League says, they can the soap out of them.

UNDER the reform ballot law, which goes into effect in 1889, the whole matter of the printing and distribution of bal-lots is taken out of the hands or cam-paign committees, and the work is done at public expense, the cost of printing in city elections being paid by the city treasury, and in all other elections from the treasury of the commonwealth. The

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC, ter," may help the average voter to undestand where some of the money goes, which is supposed to be needed for the printing of ballots. The use of money in elections has come to be such a grow ing evil that many advocate the passage of a law similar to the one in England, requiring all moneys spent in a campaign to be strictly accounted for, those having it in charge to make a sworn statement of their disbursements. If all the States would adopt our reform law, and also a law similar to the English one, a great would be taken towards a pure and uncorrupted ballot box.

> THERE have been numerous inquiries as to why it is necessary to ring the bells for a half hour three times a day on holidays. Could not just as much patriotism be expressed by ringing for fifteen min-utes each time, and thus lessen the tor-ture one-half to all invalids and others troubled with weak nerves. In the thickly settled portions of the city, where hundreds of people dwell in the immediate vicinity of the bells, up more ingenious torture could be devised than the half-hour of steady ringing. The first five or ten minutes are not so unpleasant, but after that time the effects upon ant, but after that time the effects upon the sick are more easily imagined than described. The city physicians dread the effects of the noise upon their patients, and probably all of them would heartily endorse any movement to have the custom abolished. It is an old and honored custom, originating in the days when the dwallings were scattered and when the dwellings were scattered, and the tones of the bell were mellowed by long distance, but the times have changed, and in cities the time should either be shortened or the custom abolished altogether. As another noisy holiday is approaching, it is very respectfully suggested to the city government that the usual order be amended, and the bells ordered rung for only fifteen minutes, instead of half an hour.

> A CORRESPONDENT asks the following conundrum: "How does the tariff bene-fit American labor, when at all the large mills in the country the pauper labor of Europe has come over and driven American labor out of the field?" In one of can labor out of the field?" In one of the representative cotton mills of New England, he says that out of 800 employ-ees only 80 are native Americans. But our correspondent should take a larger yiew, and think how much better the view, and think how much better these foreigners are off than they were at home. The American laborers have no business to be laborers, they should all be capitalists and then they would not suffer from the competition of foreign

THE State Republican League is sending out circulars, setting forth its aims and purposes. The address was published last week in the Boston daily pa-pers, where most of our readers saw it, so that there is no need of reproducing it. THE stirrng times of the war and Newton's share in it are recalled by the Eliot Guards' anniversary celebration, which was held on Monday at the Woodland Park Hotel. A report of the exercises, and an account of the welcome given them on their return from the war will be found on another page.

Base ball enthusiasts were attracted by an article in the Boston Herald the other day headed, "Stevenson and Fielding," Their disappointment was great on finding that it had nothing to do with the national game, but with some kind of a "literary feller."

BOTH branches of the City govenment will meet next Monday night, and the Common Council will probably make some disposal of the electric light order. If this matter is settled, the city council will probably be able to adjourn over July and August.

the Channing church on Sunday after-noon, Dr. Shinn made an address upon this topic, of which the following is an affection. One was the city of his birth and the other was the city of Newton, in ticians expected, which is provad, the real cause for any dissatisfaction that real cause for any dissatisfaction that exists, they should content themselves exists, they should content themselves exists, they should content themselves are already than the content was t possesses advantages greater than New ton? The beauty of its situation, the the Republican League says, they can at the manufacturers in the fire and fry from gross vices, the earnestuess of its religious organizations, the high standing of its schools and the good manage ment of its municipal affairs, made it unique among the cities of this country. Many places were larger and some were distinguished for [special features, but taking all things into consideration there is no wonder that the Newtonian finds himself in love with Newton. It is a place that grows upon one's affections when one sees how much there is here ost of distribution will be paid for by that is excellent, and how the city is pre cost of distribution will be paid for by the city. This will largely reduce the legitimate expenses of the campaign and the political workers will find elections far less profitable. The day may come when the traditional postage stamp will be all the expense incurred by any candidate. It would be interesting to know the traditional postage stamp will be all the expense incurred by any candidate. It would be interesting to know the traditional postage stamp will be predict that in ten syears more the 20,000 residents of today will become 30,-000—for cities grow rapidly after they are supported by the carried to the farmed and the trip is prediction. just where all the money goes that is now raised for campaign purposes, and who gets the benefit. The remark of a certain politician at Chicago, that the success of a milhonaire candidate would "keep the boys warm through the win-" Newton? If, for example, there was a decided effort made to open the liquor traffic here, what would be the effect of licensing say three places in each ward? Twenty-one bar rooms in the city of Newton would of themselves mar this city so that it would become a very diferent place. Degraded homes, drunken men reeling upon our streets, ragged children, street brawls—shall we have all these, from which we are now so free? A lack of vigilance on the part of our people may bring such a calamity upon us in the future, as indeed it may bring other calamities. The speaker then went on to describe the activity of outside parties in circulating impure literature, and the efforts of the managers of gambling enterprises, especially the lottery schemes, to reach those who have money to risk. It is necessary to be on the alert against the crafty plans of those who, in their greed for gain, would pollute every pure fountain and cover the loveliest things with mire. Laws are passed against the dissemination of vicious books and papers, and gambling in all its forms is condemned, but the activity of those who are ready to defy the law and open the flood gates of evil, is scarcely appreciated. He concluded by urging the creation of good citizenship, which includes a disposition not only to obey the laws, but to see that the laws are enforced. He made a plea for greater readiness on the part of educated men to accept office when offered to them by their fellow-citizens, instead of standing alof from the administration of local affairs. He regarded it as a duty for honorable men to make the offices of a city honorable by showing that they cannot be bought nor sold, and that they are not mere stepping stones for personal advantage. He felt called upon to warn the people of Newton that their beautiful and peaceful city could not always be what it is to-day, unless the intelligent, law-abiding portion of its population set themselves against the tides of evil that flow from intemperance, licentiousness, gambling and corrupt politics. children, street brawls-shall we have all these, from which we are now so free!

The sixteenth piano recital by the pupils of Miss Mary E. Stone, assisted by Miss Lena Flagg, violinist, Mrs. A. C. Morrill, soprano. Mr. G. W. McCloud, bass, and Mr. C. H. Whittier, accompanist, was given at Odd Fellows' Hall, Waltham, Saturday evening, June 16. An excellent program was rendered by thirteen of the pupils.

At half past seven the recital was opened by the well known overture, "William Tell." by Jennie Bailey and Gertrude Trowbridge. Solos followed by Addie Bradbury, Marion Sumner, May Tolman and Etta Burke. Mr. G. W. McCloud gave a very fine selection entitled "Anchored." Ethel Woodbury, Minnie French and Minnie Richardson finished the first part of the program with solos. The second part was opened by a trio from Misses Scamman, Woodbury and Tolman. Following came an elegantly rendered solo by Mande Banks and a violin solo "Spanische Tanze," by Lena Flagg. This was appreciated so much by the andience that Miss Flagg was called out the second time to give another pleasing selection. Solos from Nellie Scamman, George Stranch and Lillian Hoar followed, after which Mrs. Morrill gave the beautiful song, "The New Kingdom," She was also called bow. Solos by Gertrude Trowbridge and Jennie Bailey, and a trio by Misses Hoar, Richardson and Banks completed the program. Six boquets were given. Miss Stone may be congratulated for her success the past year, as teacher to her many promising pupils.

Gently swayed by the summer air,
But sadly we know it is a signal
That the angel of death has entered there.

Just over the way are fond hearts burdened;
A fair young maid in death lies low.
From dawn to eve we have watched and waited Fearful, yet praying she might not go.

But now her mission on earth is ended,
And the angel who entered so softly there
Has borne the cherished one of the househo To a home up yonder, that's wondrous fair,

From The Yankee Blade. EZRA GROMBLE'S SMILE.

BY HOWARD M. HOKE.

In Shady Lane the sourest man, beyond all question, was Ezra Gromble. It was a common assertion that in his in-fancy he had fallen into a vinegar vat and was not rescued until he was thoroughly soaked. But, despite this, he was everywhere deferred to, being very

The villagers declared that Ezra had alphabetically growled on every subject in the Encyclopedia Britannica, and then, Alexander-like, grumbled because Solomon said there was nothing new under the sun. Any adjective applicable to a scowl will fit his face; it had never worn a smile within the memory of man.

His wife had suffered an untimely death; there were grave fears for a run-away daughter, and a son was goodness knows where, all of which might be accounted for by comparison with the dis-integrating action of acid.

It was Ezra's custom to sit upon his front porch, which was as much awry as his face, and growl about the weather, no matter how delightful it was; about evmatter now definition to was, about everything, no odds how admirable it was; to snarl in summer because it wasn't winter, and in winter because it wasn't summer; and he presented such a repellant picture that it came to pass that weeds grew luxuriatly in the walk visitors would have taken to his front door, and that even a village cur would scarce venture nearer than the middle of the highway.

Now it came to pass that Shady Lane was agitated as only such a place can be An enterprising citizen—name not cer-tainly known on account of the numer-ous claimants of the honor—had elo-quently declared that the town's interests thirsted for waterworks; that the parched throat of Sandy Lane was choked with unlaid dust; and immediately "water-works or no water-works became the gushing cry of the day.

Of course, a general meeting was alled. What American enterprise was were works or no waterworks became the gushing ory of the day. The country of the day of thropic scheme his legislative mind thropic scheme his legislative mind pro-jected, but as it was the Honorable Williken Mogg, the country may reasonably be imagined to be in a state of profound expectancy.

The meeting resulted in twenty-nine vice-presidents and the appointment of a committee to canvass the town for subscribers to water stock. Immediately scribers to water stock. Immediately after adjournment, this committee held a consultation, which the Honorable Mogg dignified by his presence.

By his moving oratory he soon persuaded this imposing body that the all-important first step was securing Ezra Gromble's support and liberal subscription. tion. Gromble was the richest man in Shady Lane, and according to Mogg's view and parliamentary diction, the scheme was a "dead rabbit" if his support was withheld.

But Smith, the chairman, had once solicited Gromble's subscription for a new church; Barkins, for a school-house; Wright, for a poor family, and they, re-trospectively, as it were, quailed. But Honorable Mogg knew the power of political influence—by personal observation, though he used the noun "experience." He had seen it miraculously change peeple's opinions, and force, like an ant dragging a disproportionate cat-erpillar, an unpopular measure through the state legislature. He regarded it as a sort of Aaron's rod, on the application of which to Ezra Gromble's stony obduracy the watery enterprise would gurgle into life. That accomplished, he was certain of the promised land—the state of national senate. He nobly offered to be spokesman, and the committee gener ously interposed no objection.

Besides this public enterprise there was an unconsummated one of a private nature, though the Sandy Lane gossips had successfully devoted their busiest moments to giving it publicity. By far the ripest, sweetest and withal the worthiest little maid of the village, Rosie Matern, and Ezra Gromble's son Ben, with rare good taste, had conceived the praiseworthy enterprise of becoming possessor of all this ripeness, sweetness and worth But Ezra, for no sufficient reason un But Ezra, for no sumcient reason under the sun—a frequent condition of the most unyielding obstinacy—had impeded this project by a snarling threat of disinheritance. Ben regarded this impediment as a mere cobweb across his path, but Rosie strengthened it to a formidable barrier by firmly refusing to be wooed or won under such circumstances, and her father, who disliked old Grom-ble as he would any other ill-favored object, heartily applauded her grit. Ben coaxed and pleaded. Rosie was firm. Ben threatened to "go to the dogs;"

Rosie cried a little at this, then called him a lttle goose and remained firm.

Ben took his first step dogward by getting drunk on an afternoon, and pro-gressed several leagues by reeling by Rosie's home while she sat on the veran-der. She sent him a tear-punctuated note, saying that she would never, never see or speak to him again. Ben packed his satchel, and a filial farewell, bestowed a curse upon his father, which amounted to about the same as striking a stone wall with his fist; he then left town, and it was not known if he reached his canine destination or not, though it was believed that he had.

Arrayed in the identical suit in which he had seconded the motion, the honorable Williken Mogg marshaled the waterworks committee to Ezra Gromble's home. The personified scowl glowered from the porch, and it may be that the approaching gleam of the legislator's white vest increased the scowl—if that were possible-for when they trampled the season's undisturbed crop of gypsum, mullen, etc., on the path, Ezra looked as if he had breakfasted on limes sliced in coming and impressive pause, he re-plied with resentment equal to the illus-trious earl, though his words may not be handed down as encouraging to strugtrious earl, though his words may not be handed down as encouraging to struggling orators.

"Gromble, you're an ass; a stupid ass; I must say, a capital A double s, ass." Psychologists tell us that every nation, however meek, can be aroused to fury if goaded at the proper point. Dogberry's was inflamed by simply "ass," but Ezra Gromble's most sensitive point remained undisturbed under the accumulated opprobrium of "capital A double s, Ass." He didn't change the position of his cowhide boots a hair's breath nor did his seowl abate the one hundredth part of a wrinkle,

There must have been something particularly irritating about the angle or the general make-up of those boots; perhaps the bungled patch that stretched diagonally across the boot of the left one, but anyhow, the electrical button of Mogg's wrath, so to speak, was vigorously pushed.
"Gromble," he said, with withering auynow, the electrical button of Mogg's wrath, so to speak, was vigorously pushed.

"Gromble," he said, with withering scorn (caught from a member who was called to order at the one great legislative session) "if you ever get so beside your sour old self as to smile once, it would precipitate upon his long-suffering community the most tremendous revolution or upheaval this terrestrial ball has ever experienced. Good morning."

With which crushing prediction the honorable Williken Mogg, with his head shaking as though the prize pumpkin was rocking on its plate from the force of recent handling, inflated his expansive chest, as though the powerful speech had left a vacuum to be filled, stuck his thumbs into the armholes of his immaculate vest, and strode from the porch followed by the three committee-men, like so many geese waddling to a swim.

But the canvass did not progress swimmingly. Ezra's frigidity had already congealed the water in the prospective pipes. No one would sign first, argument and entreaty were alike powerless. Barkins, with a sudden flush of courage, tried threat, and a neighboring shutter just escaped being called into requisition; even Mogg's public-spirited offer to inscribe his name first fell flat.

Evening found the subscription paper unadorned with specimens of rural chirography, Mogg beheld the crimson dawn and the state senatorship fade like an unwatered plant; the fogles were jubilant; and a juvenile parade, whose chief glory was a transparancy bearing a lampblack allegory of "A busted water main," ended in a free fight.

When Ezra Gromble retired to rest that night his extreme satisfaction with his day's work was ominously indicated by an unusually venomous scowl. His devotions were of his customary negative character; he had eaten nothing unusual, and he went to sleep lying upon his right side, as was his unbroken habit, yet his dreams resembled a phantasmagoria of the Arabian nights. And a sort of phosporescent whith even month to make a sad-iron laugh, but the most ridiculous of these two facts was the unusual feature of the occasion. The earth was still intact; the old fashioned clock in the corner worked away as sedately as ever; a robin was singing on a bough near the window, and the ordinary quiet of early morning reigned. His eyes were sore around certain muscles long dormant, so it is highly probable he had actually smiled in his sleep.

But he could not drive the risible effect of the dream from his mind. The vaticinating voice of his vest pocket rang in his ears and every time he thought of the grotesque crew waltzing, playing leapfrog with one another, and clearing the tree-tops as easily as anything else, he felt something away back in his disposition growing and expanding, and to his utter maszement he found it to be an impulse to smile. He repressed it for that morning, but when, after dreaming much the same thing for three successive nights, he sat upon his porthon the morning following them, he found it too strong to force down, and with it was a strange desire to see, just for curiosity, what the effect of a smile would be in reality. He was, of course, too matter-of-fact to expect any celestial or terrestrial commotions, but he believed it would produce some effect.

Then, as he thought of smiling, he felt something growing and expanding in a region popularly inhabited by something adout the weather or the morning that displeased him; everything looked fresh and bright, just as if he had doffed colored spectacles; and the waving weeds in the path signaled to him their true significance of the dramatic and the waving weeds in his path signaled to him their true significance of the dramatic and the waving weeds in the path signaled to him their true significance of the dramatic and the first and heartriest in congratulations was Beu's sister with whom he had lived during his absence, returned home in blooming and virtuous womanhood, and the transformed Ezra Gromble, declaring jorially, under the influence of the happy occasion, that he had wasted the best years of his lif of the occasion. The earth was still intact; the old fashioned clock in the corner worked away as sedately as ever; a robin was singing on a bough near the window, and the ordinary quiet of early morning reigned. Then, as he thought of smiling, he felt something growing and expanding in a

"Nothing much."

"Nothing much."

"Nothing much."

"It must be considerable, Mr. Gromble. That's by all odds the best thing I've saw along this road for years."

Jim fairly reveled in spreading the news through the town, and the appearance of an angel could scarce have produced more excitement. The townstolk regarded it at first as one of Jim's yarns, but eventually settled down into the belief that it was a modern miracle.

Now, the honorable Williken Mogg sat in the village grocery, looking as glum as Marius sitting amid the ruins of ancient Carthage. He pulled vigorously at the fleshy festoons that dropped from his jaws; an infallible sign with him of depressed spirits. By a sort of anomaly lack of cold water had chilled his hopes. A stranger approached and greeted him. It was Ezra's son, Ben. He was greatly changed, but he must have missed his way, though how he could have done so in view of the numerous sign-boards is wonderful, for he didn't appear to have reached "the dogs" by several degrees of latitude. Health, prosperity and sobrjety were proclaimed by his very action.

He was compelled to make himself known, and Mogg shook ha.ds. warmly.

erat degrees of latitude. Health, prosperity and sobriety were proclaimed by his very action.

He was compelled to make himself known, and Mogg shook hands warmly, and it wasn't a candidate's warmth in view of the return of a prodigal vote, for the great man's political fires were expiring in the embers.

Naturally outspoken, Ben said he had always worried about his parting from his father, especially his dreadful curse, and had come to ask forgiveness. Could Mogg tell him if his father was as ill-tempered as ever?

Mogg ave an account of the interview, and the young man's hopes fell like a bird shot on the wing. Of the intensity of Ben's remorse the legislator had his own private opinion, based on the memory that Ezra's seowl stood between him and Rosie Matern. Sons are not ordinarily apt to worry much over a parental seowl or two, besides the young fellow's glances through the window at every passer-by proved that a desire for reconciliation with his father had not alone brought him home.

Just then the stage-driver entered, placed his whip in a corner, and, not recognizing Ben, said:

"Mr. Mogg, do you believe in miracles?"

"No, I don't, and never will unless Shady Lane gets water-works."he replied shortly.

He has lost faith in commonplace af-

"Well, there's been one," continued the unabashed Jehu.

"Has there? What?"

"Has there? What?"

"I saw Ezra Gromble settin' on his porch this mornin' a smilin' like a feller readin' a alamanax."

Both were on their feet in an instant asking exciting questions, which Jim was delighted to answer.

And in a short time both were hurrying hopefully to the scene of the miracle, Mogg remarking that Shady Lane's water-works depended on that smile, and he secretly thought of his place in the next legislature but didn't say so, while Ben thought his life's happiness rested upon it, but he too didn't care to say so.

Ezra again caught the distant gleam of the familiar vest, and like springs the wrinkles flew back into the old scowl, but possession is nine points of the law, and a smile is by nature disposed to uphold its rights. The scowl hadn't time to settle itself before a memory of the dream put it to flight like Mephistopheles qualling at the cross.

"back again?" said Gromble, as Mogg appeared.

"Yes," replied the statesman, rather

At the next assembly, to which the honorable Williken Mogg was victoriously elected, chiefly through the presonal exertions and influence of Ezra Gromble, in the course of an important speech on the introduction of a famous measure to afford means for every 'said village, town, hamlet, and all and every collection of houses whatsoever used and intended to be used as dwellings in the said state,' to have a constant supply of pure, healthy, cold water, he gave utterance, amid breathless silence, to these memorable words:

WEST NEWTON, June 16, 1888. VIII.

The neighbors we have met during the past week can hardly be called beautiful in the matter of outward appearance, and yet they can please and interest as much as some of their fairer sisters, if we will listen to what they can say to

The first five are members of the great botanical family of the Cruciferæ; so scalled on account of the regular cross-shaped arrangement of the parts of all the flowers. This is one of the most natural, and also one of the largest of the families or groups into which botanists have divided the individuals of the vegetable kingdom; it contains over 1600 and it will include an account of a long ride in an out-of-the-way part of Siberia. species, of which only about 100 are pe-

Whenever we find a flower having four sepals, four white or yellow petals, six stamens, four of equal length, and two equal shorter ones, all placed regularly in pairs opposite each other, we at once recognize the family to which it belongs; we know, too, that if it has a thickened root like a turnip, fleshy leaves like a cabbage, or enlarged flower-stalks like a cauliflower, we can safely use it for food, as no member of the family has any poisonous qualities. Even those which cannot be considered as alimentary, have their uses; some as pleasant additions to a salad, like the cresses, or as condi-ments like the horse-radish, and all are anti-scorbutic. A tendency to vary under cultivation adds to the natural impor-tance of these plants; when abundantly supplied, with nourishment many of them largely increase the fleshy portion of their tissues, and in different species this takes place in different parts, as we see in the vegetables mentioned above.

The "grain of mustard seed which when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth; but when it is sown, it groweth up and be-cometh greater than all the herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it," was without doubt our Sinipis nigra. It seems to have been somewhat of a puzzle to commentators, and the many conflicting ways in which they treat it, do not tend to clear up the matter. Very few of the parables could have been its own to see the same that the seems that the same tend to the same that the same tend to see the same that the same tend to see that the same tend to s have been intended as exact descriptions of what would occur in real life. They exhibit the imagery of language so prevalent in Eastern conversation. The Black Mustard grows very much larger in Palestine than it does here, and the comparison between the exceedingly minute seed, and the plant which grows from it, is sufficiently broad to serve the Ba

The Buttercup, which we mention today, although an immigrant, is probably more abundant than any of the species formerly noted. It grows much taller than the others, and is distinguished from them very easily. The flower stem is round, while in the others it is furrowed or channelled; the leaves of all of them are divided into three parts, but them are divided into three parts, but while in all the others, either the termi-nal or the two lateral divisions have short stems, in this species they are all sessile, or the divisions spring from a common centre, as in the clover leaf.

Stellaria longifolia differs from S. media, noted two weeks ago, in having much narrower leaves and long slender stems which have not strength enough to hold themselves erect. The petals, which in S. media are shorter than the sepals, in this species are much longer.

The Silvery Five-finger is very easily distinguished from its little relative mentioned in a former article, by the white woolly surface of the under side of the leaves.

The pretty Blue eyed Grass is so well known that we need not describe it, but will make use of it as a pretext to explain to our unbotanical readers how the very great majority of plants are divided into two distinct classes; a division founded on peculiarities of growth which can be readily seen and understood by all.

These two classes are called Exogens and Endogens, or outside and inside growers, as the words mean. All the plants hitherto mentioned have been Exogens; i. e., their stems increase by external accretions, and give rise to the series of rings, seen in a cross-cut piece of timber, by which it is generally believed that the age of a tree can be determined. There are other peculiarities however; the leaves are usually netted veined, of ten serrated or parted, and when withered, they drop from the stem by a species of joint; the seed produce two leaflets when germinating, as we see when peas or beans are springing up through the soil; the sepals and petals of the flowers are generally in 4s or 5s, or multiples of these numbers.

In the Endogens, of which our Blueved Grass is an instance, growth takes place by internal accretions; each new leaf seems to send down through the soil; the sepals and petals of the flowers are generally in 4s or 5s, or multiples of these numbers.

In the Endogens, of which our Blueved Grass is an instance, growth takes place by internal accretions; each new leaf seems to send down through the sends send up only one leaflet, as w centuries since the beginning of our era. In the endogens this long life cannot endure. They do not increase much in diameter after the first few years, and the continual addition of new bundles of woody fibre so compresses the whole, that the stem becomes no longer pervious to fluids, the sap cannot rise and the tree dies.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

THE JUTY CENTURY,

The July Century is to contain another article in the series which the Rev. Dr. Buckley, the editor of the Christian Advocate, has been for sometime past contributing occasionally to that periodical. It is entitled "Dreams, Nightmares and Somnambulism." It will contain a chapter on "Mysterious Dreams Anal-

A timely article is "Disease Germs and how to Combat Them." It will be ac-companied by a frontispiece portrait of Pasteur, who has made disinfection and fermentation a longer study than hydrophobia, although it is with the latter that his name is more intimately associ-ated in the public mind.

George Kennan's Siberian paper will ride in an out-of-the-way part of Siberia, among the Kirghis and the Tartars. The reunion at Gettysburg will be re-membered by the publication of a short article descriptive of the reunions of the Blue and the Gray which have taken place within the last few years. A poem by an ex-confederate soldier, entitled "The High Tide at Gettysburg," will be printed in this number.

TICKNOR'S PAPER SERIES.

The new volume of Ticknor's Paper

TICKNOI'S PAPER SERIES.

The new volume of Ticknoi's Paper Series is peculiarly appropriate to this season, when our coasts are alive with yachtsmen and pleasure-seekers. It is the famous historical romance, "Agnes Surriage," by Edwin Lassetter Bynner, which Kate Sauborn pronounces "The best novel that has come out of Boston this generation."

The blue waters of Massachusetts Bay sparkle through its pages, and the storming and the storming are heard whistling across Marblehead bay, in the quaint old days of the Bay Colony. Bynner has in this romance begin a work for our sea-coast, such as Sir Walter Scott did for the islands and glens of Scotland, covering them with the rich and enduring glamor of poetic association.

"We catch the scent of flowers from the control of the season of the season annes are familiar to every reader of local history, Governor and Madame Shirley, the Vassals, the Royalls of Cambridge, Collector Frankland, the versatt is the season of the season of the season of copley, and others whose names are of constant occurrence in our colonial records."

—This community has met with a great loss in the death of Rev. Zachariah A. Mudge, A. M., who passed away last Friday afternoon, June 15, after a severe sickness of six weeks, aged almost seventy-five years. Funeral services were held at his late residence at 4 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. Peterson, pastor of the Methodist church here, who read the Scripture lessons, offered prayer and spoke briefly of his longtime acquaintance with Mr. Mudge, and his relations to him in his present pastorate, and his great assistance to him in his work. Dr. Hovey of the Newton Theological Seminary, for forty years acquainted with him, gave an address, in which he spoke of his many excellent and exalted qualities of heating his life. The services were very largely attended, many being present, including large numbers of young people from Highlandville. #### SEWING IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

EXCELLENT WORK EXHIBITED BY THE

The exhibition of sewing in the Bige ow school attracted a large number of visitors last Friday afternoon. A special feature of the exhibition was the work displayed by the boys, who set to work with a will during the sewing hour, and whose efforts have been crowned with no small measure of success. The idea originated in Miss Shel ton's room, last year, the boys desiring to try their hand with the needle, and considerable progress has been made, many of the articles displayed this year being very finely executed, both as regards sewing and embroidery.

The Graphic reporter visited the school and was shown the work in the several gradss. The boys' specimens of needle work in the sixth grade, Miss Shelton's class, was the first work in-spected, and the variety of articles displayed is ample evidence of the capacity of the male members of the schools in the more intricate work in the art of sewing. Appended is a list of some of the articles exhibited. Table scarf, finely embroidered, Clifford H. Kendall, 10 years, 5 months, handsome banjo bag with embroidered initial, E. O. Childs, 11 years 10 months, (this boy exhibits 14 articles including tims ooy exhibits 14 articles inclinding pretty pin cushions, specimens of embroidery, needle books and fancy work, all cleverly executed and pretty in design; crazy quilt, original design with specimens of embroidery, Phillip Macomber; embroidered splasher, Albert S, Partridge; embroidered lander, bare

The girls in grade six also exhibit some fine work, the following being among specimens noted: Doll's dress with bonnnet and stockings, the latter hand knit, (the needle work is admirably executed.) Mary C. Childs; silk doll's dress, very handsomely and neatly made, Marion Franklin: finnnel skirt with

duster bag, Edith Cittler; duster bag, Delia Spellman; hand made apron, Maud Lyon.

In grade four some pretty work was shown by little folks who have apparently deft fingers as well as bright intellects. The following wore noticed among the variety exhibited: Child's apron, a very neat piece of work done by Katie Holmes only eight years of age; muslin apron, Maud Beal; aprons, Daisy Crowell and Bertha Paul; pillow case, Julia Hayes; apron, Katie Gallagher; pillow case, Ethel Moore; child's bib, Lizzie Moray; child's skirt, Madge Parks; pillow cases, Lizzie Garrison; duster bag, Anna McDonald; pair pillow cases, Emily Barrows; ladies apron, Fanny Foley.

One of the handsomest specimens shown in the exhibition was a velvet embroidered banner with thermometer attached. The embroidery is executed with rare skill and the work is prettily finished in detail. This was done during the time allotted for sewing by Fred Fewkes of the seventn grade and has attracted favorable comments from numerous visitors.

In conclusion we must say a few words in regard to the decreation and arrangement of the work, which was both tasteful and effective. No little credit is due to the jauitor, the general details having come under his supervision.

FIELD DAY.

AN EXCURSION TO PORTSMOUTH AND THE ISLES OF SHOALS .- A TWO DAYS OUTING.

The Newton Natural History Society has made arrangements for an excursion to the Isles of Shoals, including a visit to Portsmouth, on the 28th and 29th of June. The plan is to leave Boston by the Eastern Division of the Boston & Maine R. R., Thursday morning, June 28th, at 9.30, and arrive at the Oceanic, Star Island, at 12.30 p. m.

After dinner there will be ample time to ramble over the island, and for those who choose, to take row boats to Apple who choose, to take row boats to Appledore or any of the other islands.

In the evening there will be one or more papers read on the geography, topography and geology of the region, and perhaps on other subjects. The former coast line will be described, the sunken area shown and the presence of the numerous islands along the coast accounted for. It is hoped an historical paper will be read on the early settlements of this part of our coast.

On the morning of the 29th the party will go to Portsmouth and can have about six hours ramble over that old and historic town. The places of interest in every direction are too numerous to be mentioned.

Portsmouth and the Isles of Shoals are two of the most noted places on the Atlantic coast, and are well worth an extended visit.

The expense of the round trip from Boston to Portsmouth by rail, from Portsmouth to the Oceanie by steamer, and return to Boston, need not exceed, including one day's board at the Oceanic, six dollars. If the number is fifty or more, it will be five dollars and twenty-five cents.

It is desirable that all applications for tickets should be made to Dr. J. F. Frisbie by Monday, June 25th, that appropriate arrangements may be completed for the excursion, as soon as possible.

most men—busy as a teacher; busy as a broker; busy in the growth and prosperity of our city; work was his nature, and the sparkle of his eye expressed the cheerfulness of his soul. Not solely because his was a closely knitted, muscular, almost iron frame did he round out the life of a century; thousands of men whose physique was equal to his, passed away before their prime; but because aside from the fact that until the last he could say. "I have no pains nor aches," he met life's demands with a spirit of equanimity, substantially satisfied that whatsoever he did, he had done as well as he could. The rasping cares of life were not a perpetual torment. There was a tomorrow, and tomorrow should not be as this day, but in good things still more abundantly. A cheerful spirit was the new wine in the old, bottle and the bottle did not burst. He also impressed me as a man of a youthful spirit. He did not know how to grow old. His was a perpetual youth. I attribute this characteristic in part to his love of nature. A man of books, a man of care, a man ever ready to assume all necessary responsibilities. God's work's in the rocks, and in the trees, in the grass and in the flowers, in the globe he made and studied, and in the globes of the universe he loved to gaze at and construct their orbits, kept him ever en rasport with the changes of nature. He lived and moved as God acts, in a world of growth, and the sap of his life never dried up. On a Sunday in June a few years ago, preaching in the neighboring church, I chose for my theme, "The lessons of Spring" from the text, "Thou blessest the springing thereof." My main object was to interest the young in watching the movements of God in the changes of nature. I had not the slightest thought that the older members of the congregation would be particularly benefited. Mr. Davis was present, and I noticed occasionally that his face beamed as though following me with pleasure, but I gave the matter only a passing thought. Judge of my surprise, when at the close of the services

Chadwick, Councilmen Powell, Fenno, Wiswall, Hunt, Bond, Hale and Greenwood, City Clerk I. F. Kingsbury, City Engineer A. F. Noyes, City Auditor Otis and Agent French of the board of health.

The services at the grave were of a simple character, and the remains were interred in the Newton cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Lucius G. Pratt. Nathaniel T. Arlen, C. C. Cook and Henry Ross, Another characteristic which I have noticed, was his calm unshaken faith in God. I do not remember that I ever heard him detail any pecularities in the dawn of his Christian life; the year of his union with the church was a year of an unusual revival in religion, and was marked by the addition of many markedly strong men; he himself had reached the maturity of manhood, but I take it that his piety was not emotional, and that his faith was as much the faith of the intellect as the faith of the heart. His piety was far from spasmodic. It was even and harmonious. I doubt whether he ever indulged much in doubts, as to the solid foundations of revelation, or of his acceptance by God and student of the Bible, a believer in the truths of the Bible, blessed with a companion of a kindred spirit, his home emphatically a Christian home, his was "The soul's calm sunshine and the heart-felt by."

In explanation of the order, Alderman Chadwick stated that the matter had been under consideration since last March, and that it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the pro-vision for better ventilation should be made. #### STONE BRIDGE.

An order offered by Alderman Nickerson was adopted, authorizing the Mayor to sign the contract, such as the committee on highways may approve, for building a stone bridge across Charles River near Bemis station and that the sum of $11,000 be and is hereby appropriated therefor, the same to be paid by ten notes, one of $2000 due in one year from date, and nine of $1000, each one of which shall mature each successive year from date, and mine of $1000, each one of which shall mature each successive year until the whole amount shall have been paid, said notes to bear interest from date thereof at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent per znnum, and authorizing the city treasurer, with the approval of the Mayor and joint standing committee on finance to issue said notes for said purpose:

REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

The joint special committee appointed to examine into the several departments of the city, having attended to the duty assigned them, beg leave to report:
They have held sessions of several hours each upon twelve different evenings and have had before them the heads of departments. His Honor the Mayor and committees have, upon request, appeared and freely made answer to inquiries and offered suggestions. The committee have carefully considered the work of the several departments and under our present system of government ment fail to find where less money than that appropriated will meet the public demands: but on the contrary, extreme care will have to be exercised by the several committees to keep within the appropriations.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Your committee recommend that the City Council request the board of health, upon the expiration of the present contract, to call for proposals for collecting house offal and the contents of cesspools and that the contracts therefor be made until such time as the city shall conclude to utilize such material upon the city farm. In the opinion of the committee, the contract for removing night soil should not be placed exclusively under the control of one man, we therefore recommend that a least two persons be licensed to do such work. Your committee believe that the collection of ashes can be more economically made by outside parties under contract than by the present system; it is therefore recommended that the board of health be requested to call for proposals for such collection, thought the several wards of quested to call for proposals for su collection through the several wards

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Your committee recommend that the horses belonging to the fire department in Newton and Newton Centre, be used in watering the streets of those villages within such a radius as the committee on fire department shall deem expedient.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT.

Your committee recommend as a measure of economy, the erection of two sta-bles, one on the north and one on the south side of the city, for the exclusive use of the highway department. Your committee further recommend that the superintendent of streets be instructed to employ none but able bodied men as laborers upon the highways, and that preference in all cases be given to the citizens and taxpayers of the city.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Under the present management, the condition of this department as to discipline and efficiency is far from satisfactory, and the longer such a state of affairs exists, the more demoralized will the condition of the force become. We therefore recommend that a thorough reorganization of the department be made.

water department.

PUBLIC PROPERTY.

PUBLIC PROPERTY.

We recommend that the committee on public property be requested to take into consideration, and report as to the advisability of employing some one person to attend to general repairs in all public buildings. It is further recommended that the same committee consider the expediency of securing a new site for the city farm.

STREET LIGHTS.

Your committee are of the opinion that the city of Newton has not received a proper equivalent for the money paid for lighting streets, and recommend that through the committee on fuel and street light better results may be obtained.

CITY TREASURER.

We recommend that the payment of all employes in the several departments of the city be made by the city treasurer or his assistant.

AUDITOR'S DEPARTMENT.

Owing to the increased duties imposed upon the auditor of accounts who is also clerk of all committees, we recommend that the city conneil provide him an as-sistant in his department.

REGISTRARS OF VOTERS.

The committee are of the opinion that the $600 appropriated for services of registrars of voters is a fair and just amount for said service, and should cover all expense for their personal service, and if, as in evidence before the committee, two members of said board perform the greater part of the labor, then we recommend an equitable division of said amount, say $200 each to the two doing the larger part of the work, and $100 each to the other two.

The board then took a recess.

Upon reassembling, the board considered the order from the common council, amending the electric light order, which provides that a contract be given to the Newton Electric Light Co., to do the entire lighting of the city at an expense of $27.000 per annum for three years, so as to read for one year, and referring the same, together with a communication from the Newton & Watertown Gas-Light company, offering to do the electric lighting for the city at a cost of $24,500 per year, to the committee on fuel and street lights.

Aldermen Ward and Chadwick opposed and Alderman Childs favored a concurrence with the common council. Discussion ensued, and the order was finally passed in concurrence.

Mayor Kimball informed the board of the death of the venerable Seth Davis, and suggested that the city council attend the obsequies, as an evidence of respect to his memory. The board voted te send a floral tribute and to attend the funeral.

The Common Council.

The Common Council.

All the members of the Council were present except Councilmen. Gore and Hale. After the reading of the records, the jury list was taken up and the following substitutions made: George E. Allen for A. S. March, Jr., of Ward 1; Alden E. Bartlett for George A. Strout of Ward 2; Aaron Barker for John S. Leonard of Ward 3; E. E. Moody for Charles F. Ford, F. W. Freeman for W. B. Kinney of Ward 5; James Cutler for A. W. Armington of Ward 6; George H. Mandell for H. E. Barker, Henry Fuller for W. H. Brackett of Ward 7. The list was then accepted.

CONCURRENT BUSINESS

whole matter be referred to a special committee, to have them look into the whole matter of electric lighting and to consider the project of the city doing its own lighting. He called for a yea and nay vote on Mr. Fenno's motion to take the order from the table.

Councilman Fenno said that it was true that he intended to amend the order, to make it a one year's contract instead of three. The President of the Electric Light Co. had told him that the directors had voted to accept a one year's contract under the circumstances, as they expected to make the lights so satisfactory that there would be no opposition to renewing the contract.

The roll was called and Councilmen Fenno, Moody and Greenwood voted yes, the remainder voting no, and the order was left on the table.

Councilman Hamblen then presented a motion for the appointment of a special committee, consisting of the President and two councilmen, and such aldermen as might be appointed to consider the street lighting question, and also the feasibility of the city's operating its own electric light plant, and to report in writing at as early a date as possible. He said that the street light committee had the time necessary to properly consider the question. He had received a communication from the gas company, offering to light the city by electricity; to furnish 600 incandescent lights of 25-candle power for $13.50 per annum, 60 arc lights for $2,450, the arc lights to burn all night, 20 nights in the month, and the incandescent to 1 a. m., twenty nights, and on such other nights as should be necessary, and to make a contract for one or three years, and to adopt any electric system desired by the city. The mechanical part of the works would be placed in a fire-proof building, and the city could have the right to use the poles for any purpose. The gas company, one by the city and the third by these two; also the city and the third by these two; also the city and the third by these two; also the city and the third by these two; also the city and the third by recommend what would be best and most economical for the city.

Councilman Kennedy said he could not agree with the last speaker. He was satisfied that the street light committee had left nothing undone for the past six months to get what would be best for the city, and that it would be perfectly safe to leave the whole matter to them.

Conneilman Fenno said that he could not help feeling hurt at the remarks and the order for a special committee. No committee in the city government had ever investigated a subject more thoroughly than the street light committee had done the question of lighting the city. The whole committee would feel humiliated by the passage of such an order. He knew of no subject which had occupied so much of his time. There was one saving clause in the offer of the gas company, "if they could get the permission of the gas commissioners to furnish electric lights." and perhaps they could not get it. The committee had asked for a bid from the gas company and adjourned to wait for it, but the one they got was not satisfactory, and the committee had voted unanimously for the electric light order.

Councilman Hamblen said he did not wish to hurt the feelings of any member. He had only quoted the remarks of one electric light order.

Councilman Hamblen said he did not wish to hurt the feelings of any member. He had only quoted the remarks of one of the members about the lack of time. He did not see what right the city government had to vote $27,000 for work, when they could get it done for $24,500. If such a contract was made as the committee proposed, how could we get the benefit of any competition in the future, with their wires on every post the city owned. Who could tell whether the work was done cheaply or not? The Edison men and others claimed that the city could operate its own plant for $17,000 a year, and have we any right to vote to spend more than this? Some claim that the Thomson-Houston system is not a safe one. As for the work done by the Newton Electric Light Company, he knew of his own knowledge that the arc light on Washington street near his house, was out very often and the streets in darkness. Sunday night the Newton station had to be lighted by gas, and Saturday night the electric lights were out. The city should have the benefit of competition, which they would not have if the proposed contract were made.

Councilman Fenno called attention to the fact that the gas company did not have the streets and that the gas company did not he fact that the gas company did not he fact that the gas company did not he streets and that the gas company did not he fact that the gas company did not he called the contract were made.

TO preserve the richness of color or delicacy of tint of your summer dresses, make suds of hot water and IVORY SOAP, allow to cool until lukewarm, then wash your dresses in the solution. Ordinary soaps contain too much alkali, which in a short time bleaches the color and destroys its beauty. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The IVORY SOAP can not injure the most delicate fabric."

clude interest and depreciation of materials, which would bring the figures up to over $20,000. As for the wiring of the city, the contract provides that it be done to the satisfaction of an expert inspector. The Thomson-Houston company have a capital of a million dollars, and they guarantee the city against loss. Councilman Hamblen said that the $17,000 had been stated by Mr. Jenks to include both interest and depreciation. Councilman Read said he was not at present prepared to favor either system and the majority of citizens he met did not favor having the whole city lighted by electricity at present.

Councilman Moody hoped the motion would not prevail as it implied a lack of confidence in the committee.

Councilman Hamblen said the committee wanted to stick to their report and he did not blame them.

Councilman Rice said he should oppose the city's buying any electric light plant at present.

President Burr called Councilman Bond to the chair and amended the order by striking out the word President and having it read three councilmen. He said that his whole line of study and practice was so far removed from the work contemplated that he would be the poorest member to put on the special committee. The amendment was voted on and lost, and then the motion of Councilman Hamblen was voted on and also lost.

President Burr then moved, (Councilman Kennedy in the chair,) to take the electric light order from the table, in order to make a final disposition of it. The motion passed and Councilman Fenno moved to amend by making the contract for one year instead of three, which was done. The question then came up of suspending the rules and giving the order a second reading and for the first time probably in the history of the council, the motion for a second reading failed to receive a majority, the vote being a tie.

Councilman Fenno rose to a point of order, stating that there was no necessity of a suspension of the rules to give the electric light order a second reading.

Councilman Kennedy was recalled to the chair and stated that his reason for sor fulling was on account of a change in the order, authorizing the committee on fuel and street lights to make the contract of one year instead of for three years.

Councilman Fenno appealed from the decision and by vote of the council the ruling was sustained, two voting in the negative.

Councilman Burr then took the chair and Councilman Kennedy called the attention of the council to the necessity of arriving at some settlement of the electric matter, Councilman Read endorsing the sentiments of the member from Ward One.

DEATH OF SETH DAVIS.

NEWTON'S CENTENARIAN PASSES PEACE-FULLY AWAY.

On Monday evening at 9 o'clock, the venerable Seth Davis passed away at his residence on Watertown street, West Newton, at the age of 100 years,9 months and 22 days. Such along lease of life is granted to but few men, but the years of this centenarian have been years of honor and goodly living. Since the celebration of his 100th birthday last September, he had been gradually sinking. About a year ago he fell upon the sidewalk and received such severe injuries that he lost the use of his limbs, and the infimities of gradually share, since heart in infirmities of age have since been in-creasing upon him, until death came to

The main facts in his life are wellknown to Newton people, owing to the celebration of his birthday last year, and they may be briefly recapitulated.

HIS EARLY LIFE.

Mr. Davis was born in Ashby, Mass. Sept. 3, 1787,. He was the son of Timo-thy Davis, who was born in Townsend, Feb.2, 1760, and his grandfather was among the early settlers of the latter town. His father and grandfather were engaged in the manufacture of wrought nails, the only kind then known. When Mr. Davis was quite young his parents removed from Ashby to Townsend. At removed from Ashby to Townsend. At the age of 8 years he commenced his school life, attending a village school, where he pursued a preparatory course of study for about six weeks. The next winter he went to school to Master Locke, for about the same length of time. His entire school days covered a period of 19 months, the last three of which were spent in a school taught by Mr. Wm. Trowbridge, in Newtonville. Wm Trowbridge, in Newtonville,

When he was 12 years of age he was apprenticed to a miller in West Townsend, and took charge of the saw mill, grist mill and cabinet shop. At the expiration of his time he was let out to work in various places, and

June 26, 1802, with his wardrobe tied up in a pocket handkerchief and the pos sessor of 25 cents in money. He weut to work for Mr. Henry Crafts for $6 per month, and continued in his employ for about four years. When his labors were completed he occupied his leisure hours in reading with a view to gaining know-ledge. He also acquired the rudiments of mathematics, and was a keen observer, it being a custom with him to store his mind with all the useful information he could acquire. In the year 1806 he was offered a district school in Mason, N. H. near Townsend, and commenced to teach in this school in December, 1806, remaining there three months. In 1807-8 he taught two schools two months each in Townsend, and in the winter of 1868-0

In 1814-15 he tanget the East school in Newton, and in 181-17 tanget both the East and West schools. the slaves. In his later years he had been Republican. Until within a few months his memory had been well preserved, and he often related incidents connected with the inauguration of President Washington. He also frequently alluded to the first time that Lafayette visited this country, and of the honor conferred upon his pupils, who were ranged on either side of the road upon the occasion of his visit to Newton, shaking hands with the distinguished foreigner. In speaking of the growth of Newton, Mr. Davis said that there were only five dwelling houses in West Newton village when he first came there.

Mr. Davis was a member of the First Baptist church, Newton Centre. He was elected treasurer of the society in 1818, and served as clerk and treasurer for thirty years.

On the occasion of his 90th anniversary, the event was appropriately celebrated, and many old pupils and friends attended the exercises. When the time for his 100th anniversary approached, a committee of the city government and five gentlemen from each ward of the city were elected to make necessary preparations for its observance. The occasion was celebrated with interesting exercises Sept. 3, 1887, on the grounds of his estate. Watertown street. Addresses were delivered by Hon. Alexander H. Rice, Prof. D. B. Hagar of the State Normal school, Mr. Allen Kingsbury and Mr. Nathaniel T. Allen. Rev. S. F. Smith, D. D., contributed an original poem, and selections were sung by the pupils of the Davis school. Over 1000 people were present, including old pupils, relatives and friends, members of the city government, distinguished guests and citizens.

"There" said the beautiful Amelia Wintergreen, casting a diamond ring at the feet of Ethelbert Flitterbat, 'take the jewel you gave me. I shall marry Mr. Smithereen who owns that horrid dog from which you ran yesterday, leaving me without protection from that dreadful beast. You are a coward, Mr. Flitterbat, If Mr. Smithereen had not kindly saved me," sobbed the charming girl, hysterically, "Il should not have been rescued, Please go, Mr. Flitterbat, and forever." "Amelia," moaned that wretched young man. "hear me. Know that my right eyes was once a rabbit's. It was with my right eye that I saw Smithereen's cur approaching us. I knew he was a great rabbit dog, Amelia, and so I ran. I am the victim of science, but I am no coward." "How romantic," murmured that glorious girl, "Forgive me, Ethelbert." [Chicago News.

HARRISON AND MORTON.

The Chicago convention might have done so much worse that there is a very general feeling of satisfaction over the Presidential ticket. Both General Harrison and Mr. Morton are eminently respectable men, of unstained public and respectable men, or unstanted profits in private character, and no scandals in their past can be raked up against them. Voters who make it a condition of their support that the candidates must be honest men, will have no hesitation in deciding to support Harrison and Mor-ton, and a majority of the voters feel that it is the best ticket we have had since the last term of General Grant.

General Harrison comes of a distinguished family, which certainly counts for something, and his public life has been above reproach. He is an excellent public speaker, and of more than average ability, and if elected he is believed to form, of honest money and generally of wise legislation. He has not been ex-actly a civil service reformer, but he does not come from a civil service reform state, and the cause has now made form state, and the cause has now made such progress, and is so sustained by public opinion that no president could afford to entirely disregard it, and General Harrison would probable be at least as satisfactory as President Cleveland has been in this respect.

Mr. Morton is also an excellent candidate and would honor the position of Vice President. His generality is pre-

Vice President. His generosity is proverbial and his record as American min-ister to Paris shows how ably he can fill a high position.

The candidates are very satisfactory and had they been placed on the plat-form of 1884, there would have been very little doubt of their election. The protection plank is an anomaly in the history of politics in this country, and already the Democrats have taken advantage of the extreme position taken, and are accusing the Republican party of making free whiskey, free tobacco, higher taxes, extravagant expenditures, and propertion to all trusts excent the whisprotection to all trusts except the whiskey trust their campaign mottoes. The free silver plank is another disadvan-tage to the party in this section. However, the leading Republican papers are already insisting that the Republican party is really in favor of tariff reform and a wise reduction of the surplus, and political platforms are not generally held to mean anything. Gen. Harrison is too shrewd and sagacious a politician to allow himself to be handicapped by what promises to be an unpopular plat-form, and in his letter of acceptance he will doubtless take such a liberal and in. dependent stand as to deprive his op-ponents of any advantage they might otherwise gain from the ridiculous extra vagances of the platform.

MR. WADE FOR CONGRESS.

The Milford Journal seems to be laboring under a false impression in regard to Hon. Levi C. Wade, for in its last issue is found the following; is found the following;

The Newton Graphic is quite zealous in its advocacy of Levi C. Wade of that city for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Ninth district, as of course it has a right to be. Will the Graphic kindly inform us:

1st—1s Mr. Wade in accord with the Republican national platform on the tariff question? In other words, is Mr. Wade in favor of a protective tariff?

2d—Did Mr. Wade support the Republican nominee for President in '84?

We ask these questions for information merely, but they would seem to be eminently proper ones.

We agree with the Journal that they are proper questions and the Graphic are proper questions and the Graphic takes pleasure in answering them. In the first place Mr. Wade is in favor of a otective tariff, and the Journal can find no possible fault with him on that score. In the second place Mr. Wade did support the Republican nominee for president in 1884, like many other previously respectable and honest Republicans. We trust that we have satisfied Comp who would give it some of the prestige it once enjoyed in the earlier days of the party.

There is fortunately no question of Mr. Wade's ability, his career in the State legislature, and as speaker of the house settled that question, and if more proof were needed, it is only necessary to point to his success in the railroad business since he left political life. We recall no available man in the district who is and trailing. better fitted by education and training, who is more accustomed to dealing with men and with questions of national importance. The equestion is, shall the district repeat the disastrous policy of putting up men who become mere ciphers in Washington, or shall it send a man who already has a national reputation.

A great advantage in nominating Mr.

Wade would be his through knowledge or if Mr. Wade could be persuaded to adopt modern political methods and go about the district soliciting for votes, he could easily secure the nomination. But Mr. Wade is not that kind of a man, and the GRAPHIC would not advocate his selection if he were. The office seeking the man and not the man the office, may be old-fashioned and obsolete doctrine, but it would be much to the credit of our politics if it was adhered to.

MUCH IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

A large amount of important business was transacted at the last meeting of the city government. The contract for the Bemis bridge, to cost $11,000, was au-thorized, and the committee has rightly decided that it should not be all paid for in one year. It is to be of stone and will last possibly a hundred years, while but few if any repairs will be necessary. The payments will be spread over ten years, $2,000 the first year, and $1,000 each year thereafter. The bridge at Lower Falls will probably come next, as a new bridge is even more needed there than at Bemis station, owing to its being on a more travelled street, and the present structure being in a dangerous condition.

What has been irreverently called the "smelling" committee, which has been investigating the various departments of the city government, made their report, and they have evidently done their work in a thorough and impartial manner. They recommend a reorganization of the police department, to place it on a more satisfactory and business like basis, and the recommendation will probably be the fact that the auditor is also

The clerical work is about all that an Auditor Otis has been the hardest worked official at City Hall, and a permanent assistant will be a great relief to him, although he will still have relief to him, although he will still have plenty of work to do, as it is necessary that all the work of the office should be done promptly. Probably when the new assistant comes it will not be necessary for the auditor to remain at his office un-til midnight, as he has heretofore had to do a great part of the time.

The new school house at Thompsonville was also ordered, and $4,500 appro-The delay has saved the city several thousand dollars, as the present sum is about half what the school com mittee at first thought absolutely neces-

These matters and the action on the electric light order made up an unusually busy and important meeting, and the city council is evidently clearing up the docket in preparation for the summer

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT ORDER.

The Common Council may be composed The Common Council may be composed of young men, but their action in regard to the electric light contract has been of a very conservative character, and they have shown great care for the interests of the city. The old adage about old men for counsel and young men for action has been reversed and the young men in our Council can evidently be trusted to perform their, duties with all trusted to perform their duties with all necessary deliberation.

Their delay has been of advantage to the city in oue respect, in that the Electric Light Company has consented to make a brought out the advantages of competition, the gas company having sent in a bid for the furnishing of electric lights, by which the city may possibly save money. As Councilman Hamblen said, it is wholly a matter of business, and the city council is for the purpose of spending the city's money as economically and judiciously as possible. Mr. Hamblen proved himself a very effective debater, and his points were forcibly made and carried weight with the members.

The order, together with the gas com-pany's bid, has been referred back to the street light committee, as it should have been, for the committee ought not to be treated with any discourtesy. The order was probably made up according to the best light that they had, but the several hearings, the petitions, and the gas com-pany's bid, will give them the benefit of much new light, and they can be trusted was probably made up according to the to make an impartial report of what action they think will be best for the city

Competition has been proved to be an cans. We trust that we have satisfied the Journal's desire for information, and hope that it will decide to use its great influence in favor of the nomination of one of the ablest Republicans in the district, companies. Giving the gas section to the gas company and the oil lamp sec-tion to the electric light company has been recommended as a desirable compromise, and the committee will proba-bly consider whether such a plan is feas-

Newton is much better situated that most cities, where the electric light and gas companies have been consolidated, and the one company having a monopoly charges what it pleases, and from the complaints we see in other papers, the prices are not as reasonable as they might be.

MR. W. E. WEBSTER of Newton Centre can lay claim to being a successful political prophet. On June 14th, he wrote a letter to one of the state delegates, in of Mexican affairs, which would make him a very useful member. If the man best fitted for the position is sought for, or if Mr. Wade could be persuaded. Tilden and Hendricks and Hayes and Wheeler, and that the latter would be elected. In 1880 he predicted that it would be either Garfield or Harrison, and he hit one of them. Mr. Webster is very enthusiastic over Gen. Harrison's nomin tion, as he has been his ideal candidate since 1876, and is sure that he will be elected. Another Newton Centre prophet predicts the election of the ticket be-cause both candidates' names end in on, and he has never known a candidate with such a termination to his name, who was

> THE article reprinted in the Boston Transcript from the New York Evening Post, in regard to the danger of alternating currents, has been answered by a writer in the New York Times, who claims that the first letter was written by an agent of the Edison company, and that any electrician could see that it was so full of errors as to be unworthy of atten-tion, and that it was only intended to prejudice the general public. For the sake of the latter, however, he exposes the errors made at considerable length and claims that the whole letter was simply designed to raise a scare, where no danger exists, for the sake of injuring a rival company. It is hardly necessary to add that the second letter was written by an engineer employed by one of the alter nating current companies.

A pleasant feature of the High school graduation exercises was the hearty good feeling expressed by the historian towards the past head master Mr. Cutler, and the present one, Mr. Goodwin. The applause that followed both references was about equally hearty, and showed that while the pupils have not lost the love and esteem they had for Mr. Cutler, they had come to have similar feelings toward his successor Goodwin was placed by the action of the school board in an exceptionally difficult position, and that he has succeeded is equally creditable to him and to the High School pupils.

IT would be an excellent thing if the closing exercises of the Grammar schools could be held in one central hall, when the diplomas could be given out by the Mayor, as is done in many other cities. One great objection, however, is that there is no hall in any of the wards capable of holding all the school children Even Jesse Gove, who went to Chica-go on purpose to nominate Blaine, is now proclaiming himself to be one of the original Harrison men. The man or the newspaper who did not know all along that it was going to be Harrison, has not yet been discovered.

Boat Club Concert

The third Saturday evening concert at the Newton Boat Club house was attended by 300 or more of Newton's fair sons and daughters, while Wellesley, Brook line and Boston were represented, as the popularity of the club extends beyond the Newtons. An extensive illumination had been arranged by Mr. Wm. C. Hall, who had charge of the occasion, and at 7 o'clock the house and grounds, in holiday attire, of lanterns in odd shapes and devices, and flars, looked a fairy land. Owing to Mr. Hall's failure to connect with the clerk of the weather, however, a grand scurry occupied the next hour. Eight o'clock found everything housed, house and grounds ready for the wind and rain which soon came. In the large hall, music, brilliant boating costumes and a merry party drove dissapointment of the beautiful moonlight row or paddle far away. Watts' Boston Band, Mr. Partridge of the Cadet band leading, gave the following program:

The Chief object of the league is to secure obedience to the laws, more particularly the laws relating to the liquor traffic. The English people are naturally a law abiding people but there is an element in the population which does not yield as easily. We have taken into the body politic those who have not been trained as we have, to think that he law is supreme. The salutatory was in Latin and was well delivered. The original exercises were chosen this year by competition and were of considerable merit, written in easy flowing English, and the ideas expressed with clearness and force. Miss Pond gave a pleasing essay upon the beautiful in art, and Winthrop B. Greene painted the dangers to be apprehended from unrestricted immigration, both to our politics, public education and religion. We have free trade in immigrants, admitting all who desire to come, and the man who discovers some way of preventing the admission of the undesirable foreigners will be a public benefactor.

The Hero of the **Eneid was described in a pleasing way by Miss Nettic C. Jewet, and then followed a colloquy on Wordsworth, whose works the class appear to have studied with much thoroughness under Mr. George. It was interesting but a trifle lengthy, some twenty young ladies taking part.

Gayle T. Forbush gave a further description of Wordsworth as a revolutionary poet.

The literary exercises closed with an excellent declamation by Ernest F. Markham, delivered in a clear and forcible manner, after which came the class poemb, by Miss Jane H. Adams, a new departure for our High School, which has not heretofore numbered many poets among its graduates; this was followed by the class history by Miss Elsie F. Pratt, with witty allusions to events in the history of the class, which gave rise to much applause among the schoolars, and closed with the valedictory in which graceful allusions were made to Mr. Cutler and to Mr. Goodwin, the past and present head masters of the school. Both allusions were the signals for enthusiastic applause, and evidently Mr. Goodwin is taking the high place in the affections of the pupils formerly held by Mr. Cutler.

The musical part of the program deserves a paragraph by itself, for no class has ever graduated which was so highly favored with the presence of pupils of decided musical talent. The '88 orchestra, and the High School chorus have both been largely indebted to the class, and the bigh School chorus have both been largely indebted to the class, and the bigh School chorus have be here. Papa said that she wasn't at all like Miss Jones, and that they would be here by seven at the latest."

"Poor old Miss Jones—she wasn't a bad old soul, but one might have something more interesting. But whoever she is, I must be careful that she finds out nothing about my flirtation with Frank. Poor boy! He is growing quite desperate! Ah, child, you will know I suppose, about this some day yourself."

The foregoing remarks had been interchanged between two girls aged respectanged.

changed between two girls aged respectively fourteen and sixteen; and, as may be imagined, the elder had last spoken. Their names were Ella and Clara—Ella being the younger; pretty English girls, but withal frail looking, and they were sitting in a big room known as the school room, and were engaged in the somewhat face-burning occupation of roasting chestnuts. The month was October, and the great sea wind went bellowing all round the house, and bearing down the branches of the many trees which stood

The two girls whose foolish chatter has been just related were the only chil-dren of Colonel Kingstone, of the Limes, Kent. Their chatter referred to the new governess, whom the Colonel had engaged in London.

While yet his daughters were quite small, Mrs. Kingstone had died, and her death had been a great blow to her husband, who had loved her so tenderly and passionately. When the fatal malady which terminated in death first disclosed itself, and she was too weak to walk, yet itself, and she was too weak to walk, yet needed change, he carried her in his arms from room to room, loving her as the woman a man worships with all his strength of mind, soul, brain, and body, and with more than a mother's tenderness for her first born. Nor did he ever let her see his suffering, though I think he knew, what it was. When she page she knew what it was. When she may have fallen asleep with her head resting against his shoulder, doubtiess then the tears rained down on the pretty wasted hands which had once closed so firmly on Then came that dreadful time when they said their final good-bye in the yel-low light of a young November morning. All the night she had lain in an uneasy sleep, he sitting by her bedside, and only sometimes rising to stir the fire softly. Had they been going to part for week, she could not have slept all night for thinking of it. And now, when she would soon have so much time for slumwould soon have so much time for sumbering, when they should meet no more, when there was so dreadfully much to be said on both sides, she could not keep her eyes open. Perhaps through her sleep she felt this vaguely, for she moaned as she tossed from side to side.

At length she awoke with a start. Outside a rabin was trying his song of the side a robin was trying his song of the Kingstone hated robins ever after. There were a few passages of difficult breathing, a few broken words of love and despair, a long kiss. Then she fell back on his arm and so it was over, and he heard the robin singing on in the he heard the robin singing on in the garden.

He was a strong, self-contained man, between thirty and forty, rather handsome though not noticeably so, with firm lips and clear, gray, dauntless eyes, which always looked straight into yours. He let his house for some time and sent his little girls to a school where he knew they would be cared for. Then he and his troubles set out together on their travels, nor did they part company when three years after, he returned to the Limes. His daughters seeming to inherit their mother's fraility of constitution he removed them from school, thinking it better to educate them at home.

The Colonel was one of these men to whom life means action. He spent much of his time in London, where he made triends with the poor East end folks. He may have done more for their bodies than their souls, but there are always good people to see after the latter, so perhaps he fulfilled a mission after all. His idea was, as far as he could, to make them merry in a right kind of way. The man was a soldier and not a sentimentalist.

"Oh, dear, I do wonder what she will be like," said the younger Miss Kingstone. "My chestnut is burnt to a cinder. Do you think she will be tall and lean, or short and dumpy?"

"Oh, short and dumpy. I think—but there they are!"

As the house bell sounded, many dogs set up a welcoming bark. "Don't you feel sly?" asked Ella.

"No, you foolish child, of course I don't. No more would you if you had been in love. Your hair is all right, you needn't trouble about that. And so is your frock."

In a moment more Colonel Kingstone, as it were fresh from the wind's embraces, had entered with a lady and was saying—

saying—
"Miss Haywood, these are your pupils.
If they are as good pupils as they are laughters I don't think you will have much to complain of in them."
The two girls both blushed, the younger one very much needed. Then Miss Haywood was shown to her room and the family of three were left to themselves.

"Well, said the Colonel, as he warmed his hands at the fire, "you seemed sur-

"Yes, I am, very much," replied Clara, who was standing by the mantelpiece with one putty little foot on the fender, "She can't be more than three-and-twenty, and she is the most beautiful person I have ever seen. She is like the people you read about in books. I never heard of such a thing as a beautiful governess."

Colonel Kingstone admitted with a laugh that he didn't think he had either. But let us follow Grace Haywood to her bed-room and look at her for ourselves as she stands before the brightly blazing fire and hears the wind come storming about the house. As Clarasaid, she was just about three and twenty, and certainly very beautiful. The lovely face was rather pale but for the beautifully moulded and passionately red lips. The eyes were of a warm, brown color with glints of gold in them, rather reminding you of autumn leaves with the sun striking full upon them. There were gold lights, too, in her warm, abundant hair. The forchead which this hair crowned was wide and white, the hands were long and tender, the palms of delicate pink.

As she stood there by the fire there

As she stood there by the fire there was a look of great wistfulness in her beautiful eyes. Having arranged her toilet she went down stairs. Colonel Kingstone's governess always dined at his table. As she stood for a moment in the doorway while she adjusted something at her throat, Colonel Kingstone concurred in the judgment passed on her by his elder daughter. She was the most beautiful person he had ever seen. And how graceful was her every movement. But not only was Grace Haywood so good to see, she was good to hear. There was something unutterably restful and at the same time sustaining in her beautifully modulated voice. Young as she was, you felt she must have had some unusual history.

The dinner passed off very pleasantly. Both girls had quite recovered from their temporary shyness.

Dinner over, Miss Haywood entertained her pupils with music. She both played and sang well, and tonight she sang a song which had been a great favorite with the Colonel's wife.

Osweet and fair, O rich and rare,

th the Colonel's wife.

O sweet and fair, O rich and rare,
That day so long ago:
The antimn sunshine everywhere,
The heather all aglow.
The ferns were clad in cloth of gold,
The waves sang on the shore,
We said, such days will come again,
For ever, ever more!"

We said, such days will come again,
Forever, ever more!"

As he sat and listened, lingering over his wine, it seemed almost as if his wife were singing to him from out that far land to which she had journeyed so long ago, leaving him in the bleak November morning. He had not wept for many a month, but sitting alone there the tears crowded into his eyes, and he had to brush them away suddenly, and swallow a big lump in his throat when his younger and perhaps if anything his favorite daughter came into the room like a flash of light. She had been running a race with the wind and detected by its fragrance a late rose which now gleamed red in her hair.

She threw one arm about his neck, and kissing him asked him if she looked well, to which he jingled the loose silver in his pockets, and said she was a vain little witch. Then the girl went on alluding to Miss Haywood.

"Doesn't she sing well? I think we can hear her just as well where we are. Anyhow, I know I would rather be with you, and I think the dining room is ever so much more cosy than the drawing room."

"Oh! that's it, you little gay deceiver.

so much more cosy than the drawing room."

"Oh! that's it, you little gay deceiver, is it? It's the room, not your old father!"

To which Ella only replied by a laugh and another kiss. The butler just then announcing that tea was served in the drawing room, the two went there together, the Colonel with his arm dropped lovingly round his child's neck. In the course of conversation it came out that Miss Haywood delighted in old books. The Colonel had some rare editions; so when the girls had gone to bed he took her to his library to show them to her.
"I envy you," she said, as she handed him back one volume after another, he pointing out with pride his choicest specimens.

"I often think," she said, when the books had been looked at, and she was standing by the fire, her face half turned to him, "what a blessing it is that one's books cannot die. Fancy if one were to wake up some morning and find Shakespeares's works dead forever, or Milton's, or Shellev's or Keat's. The novelists talk of my own calling. I often think that the only real value of education is that it indirectly teaches us the value of books, and to appreciate them."

Then, thanking him for the treat he had given her, she moved away, graceful as a queen.

The next day lessons were commenced and all went well, governess and papils being in love all round. Clara, in the vanity of her first dirtation, could not help confiding the story of it to Miss Haywood, who, while mildly disposed to reprove, was certainly sympathetic. Perhaps she knew all about these early flirtations. "Very like, very like?"

Now it chanced that Frank's parents were from home at the same time that the Colonel was busy in London, and Frank's sisters, and certainly Frank himself, who held a fairly lucrative position in Seven-oaks, thought they might follow the good example set by the mice of old, and have some fun. So, like Hans Breitman, they resolved to "give a barty." Of course only to young people were the invitations sent out, and joyfully they were accepted.

On the evening of the auspicious occasion, a little before starting time, Clara entered the drawing room where her sister and Miss Haywood were. The latter gave a little cry and held her breath. Clara, who was clad in a becoming white gown, was absolutely ablaze with diamonds too. A diamond necklace, with a cross of the same stones depending from it was about her neck. Diamond earings flashed in her ears, diamond stars were in her hair, and diamond braceles clasped her arms.

"How did you manage to get them?" was Ella's first articulate ejaculation.

"A harmless theft, my dear, for they will go back tonight. You touch a secret spring in the cabinet in the library; then you find your key and open the case. Won't they be surprised?"

"I should take them off and put them back again at once if I were you," said Miss Haywood, quietly turning a page of her book. "If you had any right to them, even, and were old enough to wear them, you would be greatly overdoing it. As strong wine should be taken with the utmost moderation, so diamonds should be worn only in true moderation too."

"Is that your opinion really, dear?" answered the young lady, who was pl ing with her fan. "The carriage is here, I believe."

"We shan't be late, unless we lose all count of time," added Ella, who, it must be confessed, rather admired her sister's lead, and only regretted that she ceuld not participate in the jewels which the former, without leave, had borrowed for this speciel occasion.

It was about one a. m. when, flushed in spite of the cold, with dress and hair sijently tumbled, full of laugh and chatter, the two girls entered their father's drawing room. There sat Miss Haywood in the low chair where they had left her, and there with his back to the fire stood the Colonel, who had returned by a late train.

"A pleasant evening, young ladies, I hope?" he began.

Ella looked inclined to burst into tears, Clara blushed to the roots of her hair.
"I know it was very wrong," she managed to say.
"I am precisely of your opinion. Take aged to say.

"I am precisely of your opinion. Take them off, if you please, and lay them on the table."

the table."
"It was only for one night," said the unfortunate girl,
"I desire no explanation," returned the Colonel. "The fact is enough and too much. Take your candle and go. For a few days I think it will be as well that meals should be served to you in your own room. Ella has done no wrong."

But Ella sobbed as if she had and the two went away together, Clara much the more composed of the two.

Kingstone handled the bright things on the table. Then he said, addressing Miss Haywood, who had risen to leave—"I do not prize these for their worldly value—great as that is—but because my wife wore them and loved them, because they had been associated with her mother's family for grantings. Since the

"Ido not prize these for their worldly value—great as that is—but because my wife wore them and loved them, because they had been associated with her mother's family for generations. Since she put them aside I had intended that they should never be worn by another woman. And then to have them snatched from my secret and sacred places, to be flaunted and gossipped about at a children's party! It will be difficult for me to forgive this offence."

"It is so good to forgive, I think, said Grace Haywood under her breath, and with something like tears in her sweet voice. "Remember too, Colonel, that you and I are not sixteen. When we were, may we not have done things we would blush to do now?"

"You wouldn't forgive all things?" said the Colonel, looking down from his height of six feet.

"I don't think I could forgive falseness in love. If the man I loved were true to me there is nothing I would not do for him. Some women could forgive falseness, but I know I could not." Then she let one fair hand rest on the Colonel's arm, while she said, "Won't you forgive Clara tomorrow? The night that she must pass will be enough punishment."

With something like the old time grace he raised her hand to his lips, and said, "Blessed are the peacemakers."

She then thanked him with a bright smile and went swiftly away.

The next day Clara was duly taken back into her father's heart. As the November days wore on the Colonel's heart opened more and more to the beautiful governess of his children. She was a fare blending of girlhood and womanhood, as he could not help noticing. He loved her music and low impassioned singing. He began to realize that, brief as was the time she had been at the Limes, she had done much to change his life for the better. He was not a man given to self-investigation, or he might have formed some guess as to the direction in which his feelings were tending.

A week before Christmas when Clara, Ella and Miss Haywood were busily employed in decorating the house with holy and mistletoe in honor of some guest

"Dear Colonel: Most sincerely do I regret to tell you that your dear children have taken small-pox, as I judge, from a servant in the house, to whom they gave leave to visit her sick brother, not knowing what his malady was. I think it right that you should have this line of preparation. The doctor says he cannot tell yet whether the symptoms will prove favorable or not, but that good nursing is most requisite. I am proud of my nursing, having once served as volunteer in a hospital. The doctors were good enough to say that, volunteer or no, I was the most efficient nurse that they had. You do not know how little sleep I can do with. You had better burn this letter at once, and believe me, "Quite hopefully and very truly yours, Grace Haywood.,"

The Colonel, as may be imagined, was dreadfully shocked; but he was a man who never lost his head. He burned the letter. Then he wrote others, putting off his friends. Then he engaged the services of a trained nurse.

The green baize door which generally stood open between the sitting rooms on one side and the staircase leading to the sleeping rooms had been closed at the Limes. Reaching home, on the dining room table he found a note from his doctor. He read it:

tor. He read it:

DEAR COLONEL: I know you will want to see yourchidren; but do not give way to the natural wish, unless things get much worse than I apprehend. You cannot dispense with servants, and if you would keep them with you, you must protect them as far as you can from chance of infection. It is not even as though your girls were friendless. They worship their governess, and I know from what they have told me and from what I have seen myself, that she is like a young mother to them. The servants' bedrooms being on this side of the closed door, the chances of infection are rendered as small as possible. Of course you will want to know how the patients are progressing. I have thought of that. When you hear the bell ring from upstairs you will meet me outside the gates. Smoke, and bring plenty of camphor. I think there is reason to hope for the best. Yours very truly. B. STANHOPE.

I can't cheer her up," he added, and then like the good man he was he went. He found Grace half reclining on the sofa, and looking as he thought strangely excited, but then she had not been well. Would what he had come to say make her feel better? His strong heart hoped it might.

Would what he had come to say make her feel better? His strong heart hoped it might.

"The children tell me," he began, "that you are feeling unwell tonight, and I have just come to say how sorry I am." Of course he knew he had come to say a good deal more.

"No, not very well," she answered, rising herself; "and how kind of you to think of me."

"Grace," he said, coming to the point with military precision, "I want to be so kind to you that you shall never have any trouble again, if the love of a mature man's life can keep it from you, dear love," "4And here he knelt down beside her. "I cannot give you all the old romantic ardors but I can give you such love as will outlast them."

A great passion of trouble came into her eyes as she answered, "This can never be."

"And why not?" said the Colonel who had rison and was holding her hand.

ner eyes as see answered, "Ints can never be."

"And why not?" said the Colonel who had rison and was holding her hand.

"You will know tomorrow," she answered.

"And you won't tell me now?"

"No, I will not tell you now,"and she laughed, but she sobed after.

Kingstone would have kissed her, but she put up her pretty hands and said with almost fierceness, "No, go; I cannot bear it."

she put up her pretty hands and said with almost hereeness, "No, go; I cannot bear it."

"I shall see you in the morning," he said quietly. "I know some explanation must be needed here." He was rather a prosaic lover in his way of expressing himself, and he knew it.

"No, you will never see me again," and there was a very curious light in her eyes which I don't think the Colonel ever quite forgot. Then he took his leave, and after having ast smoking late, awoke about half-past seven. He was one of those men who always get up as soon as they wake. So he sprang out of bed, and, being rapid in all he did, bathed and dressed in rather less than half an hour. He went to his library which had notyet been invaded by the servant. But surely the room was not quite the same as he had left it the might before. He was—as a soldier should be—a man of keen observation. The wind had shifted and risen. There was an aggravating sense of draught in the room. Then he observed for one thing that the heavy curtains he always drew across the window at night were apart. Coming nearer he saw that the window was not only unbotted but ajar. He opened it wide, and stepping out traced on the wet gravel—for rain had fallen in the night—footsteps i rom the window to the garden gate.
"Burglars," he said; but when did

Grosteps from the window to the garden gate.

"Burglars," he said; but when did burglars have so small a foot? He had heard though of burglars sending boys into houses. He hastened back into the library and pausing in front of his cabinet he saw that it had been opened. The thief must have been in a hurry, for the rather complicated spring with which it closed had not been fastened. The key was in the lock. He turned it. The jewel case was gone! He was standing there in blank bewilderment when the door was burst open and Ella rushed in crying:

"Oil papa, papa, I went into Grace's room as I always do as soon as I am up, and she wasn't there, and her bed wasn't touched. Why, why did she run away? What did you do to her?"

And the girl burst into a passion of tears, and wrung her hands. Chra, who had just come in dreadfully pale but self-composed, asked the same question. The Colonel himself asked this question, and he knew, too, who had stolen his jewels, although he did not think it necessary to inform his children as to the fact. A gentleman, but not without sternness, he decided after his morning cigar not to prosecute the fair theif, but he could not help wondering as to the cause of the theit. Could a woman who had been all she had been to his children, who had risked her life for them, have been guilty of this thing? Yet there was very convincing proof that she had been. He called his dogs about him and tried to be as cheerful as he might be when his heart was heavy within. And was it lighter—who shall say?—when in a couple of weeks' time he received this letter:

IX. The common Plantain has always had ecial interest to us, as it recalls a warm mmer afternoon many years ago, when Hill, afterwards President of Harard University, made the subject of hyllotaxy so very entertaining to a class to boys that they forgot all their former esire to escape from school, and could ave listened to him as long as he was rilling to talk. Phyllotaxy means liter-illy, leaf order, and treats of the ar-argement of leaves upon a stem. As we look at tree, and shrub, and erb, nothing could seem more unlikely an that the mass of foliage can be ar han that the mass of foliage can be ar-anged in any attempt at order; and yet not only is the arrangement orderly, but t is mathematically exact, and follows a course laid down by the application of orecise figures. The plan is by no means the same for all plants, but in each spe-ies the arrangement is represented by ome one of the following fractions, 1-2, -3, 2-5, 3-8, 5-13, 8-21, 13-33, in which the eculiarity exists that each one is found y adding the numerators for a new numerator and the denominators for a new enominator, of the two preceding frac-ons. It is incorrect to call them frac-ons, however, for although they have e form, they do not have the character n each case the numerator expresses the umber of times an insect would have to rawl around the stem, from leaf to leaf na spiral course, to reach one which tands directly over that from which he tarted. The simplest arrangement pos-ible is where the third leaf stands exsedges: In the third method, the second leaf is two-fifths of a circumference from the first, and each succeeding one another two-fifths, till we have made a spiral going twice around the stem with ive leaves in the spiral, and the sixth coming exactly over the starting point. In this way the greater part of our shrubs and trees have their leaves arranged. The plantain gives us an instance of the next disposition, where the spiral passes three times around the stem, bringing the ninth leaf or blossom over the first. In this plant it is the flower cluster or spike, as this special form of cluster is called, that exhibits the plan. In ordinary stems, except in the two-ranked system, the regularity is seldom clear, as the stem is not perfectly straight, and occasional loss of leaves obscures the symmetry. The long spikes of the plantain, thickly set with the various phases of this leaf order. A gentle twist brings all the little blossoms into parallel rows; a further twist reduces the number of rows in exactly the ratios of S.5, 3-2, if the stem proves toughenough to permit you to proceed so far. The above remarks, apply, of course, the spiral passes three times around the stem, bringing the ninth leaf or blossom over the first. In this plant it is the flower cluster or spike, as this special form of cluster is called, that exhibits the plan. In ordinary stems, except in the two-ranked system, the regularity is seldom clear, as the stem is not perfectly straight, and occasional loss of leaves obscures the symmetry. The long spikes of the plantain, thickly set with the greenish flowers can be used to show the various phases of this leaf order. A gentle twist brings all the little blossoms into parallel rows; a further twist reduces the number of rows in exactly the ratios of 8-5, 3-2, if the stem proves tough enough to permit you to proceed so far. The above remarks apply, of course, on alternately arranged flowers. In the case of opposite leaves, the arrangement is more simple, as the second pair comes out over the intervals of the first and the third pair are directly over the first. As we proceed, it is interesting to note what a large proportion of our common plants are immigrants; also that just as occurs in the movement of mankind, it is what may be called the lower classes that form the larger part of the moving body. Desirable additions to our Flora are exceedingly few, when compared with the great body of plants which have in one way and another followed the advancing wave of settlement. Long ago our common plantain was called by the Indians. "The White Man's Footstep," for it follows more closely than any other plant every movement and the growth of plants in new localities, shows the superiority of the theory of evolution and natural selection, over what has been called the theory or design. The latterentirely tails to explain how it is that many plants and animals do not thrive in their native land with a tithe of the vigor that they exhibit when taken to some new soil; the former explains the mystery in a perfectly simple and satisfactory manner.

factory manner.

The Evening Primrose is so called because it unfolds the bright yellow flowers in the evening, which wither away early the following day. The opening and closing of flowers has been generally considered as a kind of sleep, and many a homily, many a poetic thought has been based on the idea that is necessary for all living beings, plants as well as animals. We are not quite prepared to deny that the plant does sometimes sleep, but there is a growing and well founded doubt on the subject. Many experiments have shown that this motion is not caused by the action of light alone, and the fact that most well known flowers close at evening is probably rather an instance of coincidence than of causation.

'Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep."

Conscientious and painstaking observers have agreed that it is only insect fertilized plants that exhibit this peculiar motion, and that the opening and closing has reference directly to the habits of the insects which are specially fitted to give the required aid.

Thus the Primrose has adapted itself agreeable food; for these creatures are as particular as an epicure and would not care for their wine were it unduly wa-care for their wine were it unduly watered.

We have exhausted our allotted space, and left several of our new aquaintances unmentioned; this will be unavoidable during the next few weeks, as the number is so large that our articles would become mere catalogues were we to describe each one. We will just take room to say that the Asparagus which is so universally relished, has been a favorite dish for many centuries. In the writers of ancient Greece and Rome, we often find references to it as a special delicacy. It was probably subjected to less cooking than we give it, for a Latin expression, having the meaning of our "right away," was "velocins quam coquuntur asparagi."

SITUATION. In an elaborate article in the Forum motion, and that the opening and closing has reference directly to the habits of the insects which are specially fitted to give the required aid.

Thus the Primrose has adapted itself to the movements of night-tlying moths, and it closes its doors to the visits of insects which would not be able to pay for their entertainment.

This seems to be the case with all this class of flowers; they are open at such times as their friends are about, and closed whenever they are absent. This theory also explains the closing of many flowers as a storm comes on; the movement is intended to preserve the store of honey uninjured, so that they may be able to entertain their insect guests with for July Senator George F. SCRIBNER'S.

Travel is a seasonably important subject in Scribner's Magazine, and the three illustrated articles of means and places for travel have the merit of greater solidity than is usually expected or found in such papers, facts using carefully collected as a basis of treatment. The elaborate paper by John Bogart upon "Feats of Railway Engineering" is a valuable contribution to American bistory of industry and skill, showing by text and illustration how the perils of the earth's surface have been overcome by engineering processes. An illustrated account of "Life and Travel in Modern Greece," by Thomas D. Seymour, is a connected serves of light sketches or pictures of an agricultural country and people who have retained many of the peculiarites of their ancestors, including a disinclination to labor. Astronomers will be interested in the account of famous observatories made by Charles A. Young in "An Astronomer's Summer Trup." Before reading the one short story and the serials by F. J. Stimson and Henry James, one will turn expectantly to the criticism upon "Popular Authors" by Robert Louis Stevenson. It is hazardous for one writer to criticise another, yet Mr. Stevenson, who excels chiefly in creation and not in criticism, avoids offending. Poetry is a leading attraction. A Battle Ode by George Parsons Lathrop, to be read before the Society of the Army of the Potomac at Gettysburg on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the battle, July 3, 1888, rings through the passages selected with noble energy. Poems by Graham R. Tomson, Arlo Bates and Allan Simpson Botsford are worthy of interest. Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers. SCRIBNER'S.

Our national holiday is again near at hand and Newton Centre again responds to its patriotic sentiments and offers an interesting celebration under the auspices of our Improvement Society. Programs will be posted up giving full particulars, and with a pleasant day a good time may be anticipated.

MEETING OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

SONVILLE SCHOOL HOUSE.

The School Board met at the high school building, Newtonville, Wednes-day evening, Mayor Kimball in the chair. A communication was received from the city council, being a recommenda-tion from the committee on fire depart-ment in relation to the tower and striker at Nonantum, and it was referred to the Miss Smead nominated Louisa W. Pellen as teacher in the Elliot school, Ella N. Donkin as teacher in the Jackson school, and Sarah A. Whitman as teacher in the Adams school, confirmed.

Mr. Barton read the resignation of Caroline Spear as assistant teacher in the high school and stated that he hoped an effort would be made by the board to induce her to remain, before acting up-on the resignation. He believed that she was a very capable teacher in her special department and felt, that it would be wise to ask her to remain another year. He then offered the following resolution which was unanimously

ing resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Miss Caroline Spear has resigned after 20 years of faithful and satisfactory service in the high school, this board desires to express its appreciation of that service and request that she reconsider her resignation and continue her work in the high school.

Dr. Shinn, who seconded the motion of Mr. Barton, alluded to Miss Spear's capabilities, and said that he hoped she would be retained another year at least.

Mr. Converse for the committee on salaries, reported recommending that Martha M. Dix be employed one-half day each at the Pierce, Mason and Bigelow schools at a salary of $4.50 per week and necessary travelling expenses. The report was accepted and its recommendations adopted.

Miss Smead for the committee on sewing, reported recommending that the salaries of the two teachers in sewing, who are employed the full time be increased $100 each, and that the salary of the sewing teach, and that the salary of the sewing teach, and that the salary of the sewing teach who is employed half time be increased $50. The report was received and referred to the committee on salaries.

Mr Stone, for the committee on school-salaries.

Mr Stone, for the committee on school-houses, reported that the committee had examined the strip of land adjoining the Prospect school, and would recommend its purchase by the city in order to control the light on the east side of the building.

In the light on the east side of the building.

On motion of Mr. Stone the report was adopted providing for the erection of a two room and four room building to better accommodate the pupils of Hyde and and Claffin schools.

Dr. Shinn called the attention of the board to the disadvisability of erecting any more wooden buildings for schoolhouse purposes, stating that in his opinion the building should be constructed either of brick or stone.

Mr. Barton thought that it would not be wise to construct a two-room building of brick, but that he agreed with Dr. Shinn, that public buildings, as a rule, should be built of some permanent material.

Shinn, that public buildings, as a rule, should be built of some permanent material.

Mr. Stone said that when the committee were going to construct a large building he should advocate its being built of brick, but that he thought wooden school houses would be more desirable in the present case.

Mr. Dickinson said that he believed in putting up buildings in a solid manner. He was glad Dr. Shinn made the suggestion, and he agreed with him in his views upon the matter.

Dr. Shinn said that the tendency to put up large buildings was passing away and asked Mr. Parker to give his views upon the subject as he was an expert in such matters.

Mr. Parker said that as a member of the committee on school houses he had not felt that it was necessary to allude to the material to be used in the construction of school houses, as little respect would be paid to any particular request in this direction. He agreed with Dr. Shinn, however, that public buildings should be constructed of more permanent material. He had always entertained a prejudice against large buildings, and thought that brick was the best material to use under all circumstances.

The following resolution offered by Dr. Shinn, was adopted: The city council is requested to consider the teasibility of using brick or some permanent material for the construction of school houses.

Mr. Barton called attention to the difhouses.

Mr. Barton called attention to the difficulty met with by the board in the Thompsonville school house matter, the city council having deeded that they could not build a $6,800 building and wou donly appropriate $4,500. We were andious to get a school house, and therefore were obliged to submit and get the Thompsonville school house was commenced.

A motion offered by Mr. Barton for the appointment of a committee of conference was adopted, and the chair appointment of Messrs. Stone, Parker, Dickinson and Philbrick.

Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke called attention to the necessity of examining into the sanitary condition of the several school buildings, and offered the following motion which was adopted: The ward committees and high school committee are requested to ask the members of the board of health and such persons as the State police may appoint, to accompany them for the purpose of examining into the sanitary condition of the several school houses of the city as soon as possible, and to submit a report of their investigations at a future meeting of the board.

Mr. Barnard of Ward 3, submitted a al education as a part of the present school system. He alluded to the distaste for manual labor on the part of many, and said that industrial education would, in a measure destroy such tendencies. It had been demonstrated a success in Europe and in this country and should receive our consideration if we hope to keep up the standard of our schools. I cannot accept the present system as the best that can be attained, and in industrial education I see a chance for improvement. It seems to me that it would be practical to adopt it as a part of our high school studies, and that it will be a step in the line of progressive thought in educational matters. I would, therefore move that a committee of three together with the superintendent of schools be appointed to consider the subject of industrial education and of the advisability of its adoption as a part of our school system. The motion was adopted and the chair appointed Messrs. Barnard, Philbrick, Emerson and Miss Smead as a committee to investigate the subject and report at a future meeting of the board.

Mr. Barton, Dr. Shinn and Mr. Frost were appointed a committee to draft the annual report of the school board.

A communication was received from Adjt. G. H. Benyon, military instructor, calling attention to the annoyance, trouble and danger incurred in going to Newton for the purpose of drill, and recommending the erection of a drill, and recommending the erection of a drill, and recommittees on high school and school houses.

A communication from Mrs. Nellie B. Rand, asking to have her salary increased to $750 per annum was referred to the committee on salaries.

The schools will reassemble on the 10th
